WE WOULD LIKE TO WISH ALL OUR READERS A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS

TAKE CARE OF IT

THE Archbishop of Canterbury today makes an impassioned Christmas appeal for mankind to care more about the world.

In a special message to Kent on Sunday readers, Dr Rowan Williams refers to recent talks in Bali on climate change.

He calls on people to help address global warming, even if that means making sacrifices.

Delegates from more than 180 countries attended the UN's Climate Change Conference earlier this month, but Dr Williams suggests one vital message was missing at the summit.

"It would have been good to hear, from time to time, a reminder that this world, this material world whose stability and welfare seems so threatened, is a world that God loves," he says.

By JAMIE MCGINNES

"And if God loves it, why don't we? Or at least, why don't we act as if we did?"

The archbishop, who is the head of the Anglican Communion, which has 77 million members across the world, goes on to say: "May you all sense something of God's own delight this Christmas, his joy in the world he has made, the world he's constantly nurturing and drawing forward in love. A very happy and blessed Christmas to all of you."

In another message in this newspaper, Dr Michael Nazir-Ali, the Bishop of Rochester, reminds readers why we celebrate Christmas.

Firm chosen for £600m school revamp

ONE of the country's biggest property developers has been picked to deliver a £600 million revamp of 15 Kent secondary schools by 2014.

Land Securities Trillium, in partnership with IT company Northgate Information Solutions, has been chosen as the county council's preferred bidder to refurbish or rebuild 15 secondary schools in Gravesham, Swale and Thanet.

The deal is expected to be finalised by June next year.

KCC will pay around 10 per cent of the estimated £600m cost, with the rest due to come from central Government.

Three of the schools will be funded by a £68m Private Finance Initiative (PFI), in which the initial bill is paid by the developer. The taxpayer then repays that bill, with interest, over 25 years.

Innovative

The schools are St John's Roman Catholic school, Thamesview and Northfleet Technology College, all of which are to be completely demolished and rebuilt.

The other 12 schools will be funded by 'Design and Build' schemes, in which the developer is paid to design and build the schools, but has no involvement in their operation.

PFI deals, such as the one that funded Darent Valley Hospital in Dartford, have proved controversial in the past with developers making huge profits by refinancing the deals and ramping up charges for ongoing maintenance.

Paul Carter, KCC leader, said the council had a good track record with PFI schemes and insisted costs would not spiral.

He said: "There are good contracts and bad contracts, and these are good contracts."

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

We have had a very good team of officers working on them and we've done our due diligence to the nth degree."

He said the deal would not only transform the schools but also make the curriculum "more innovative and exciting".

The deal is the first phase of a £1.8 billion 15-year Building Schools for the Future (BSF) project to revamp all of Kent's secondary schools.

The second phase will be for secondary schools in Ashford, Canterbury, Dover and Shepway, while the third will apply to schools in Dartford, Maidstone, Sevenoaks, Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells.

The Government introduced the BSF programme with the aim of rebuilding or modernising every secondary school in England in the next 15 years.

Land Securities Trillium manages 170 schools and around 50 acute and community hospitals and medical centres in the UK, although none are in Kent. It also builds and manages shopping centres, supermarkets and, in one case, an army barracks.

Many of these are run through PFI schemes, and the company made an operating profit of £98.8m in 2006-07.

The companies will now form a Local Education Partnership with KCC and government agency Partnerships for Schools to deliver the project, giving the council a voice in the decision-making process as it continues.

KCC said the partnership would ensure the school buildings remained in public hands.

THANK you for paying for this special charity edition of Kent on Sunday.

For two weeks during the festive period, KOS Media is charging 50p for each copy of your favourite county newspaper.

All profits raised from these sales will be donated to our Kent Kids for Christmas appeal.

Last year, our appeal raised £11,000 which will benefit Invicta FM's Help A Kent Child charity, Demelza House and Dave Lee's Happy Holidays.

We have raised more than £20,000 for the county's children since the campaign was launched two years ago.

Newsagents and wholesalers are supporting the appeal by donating part of their normal fees for handling the newspapers.

Readers can donate online to our appeal by visiting our website, www.kentkids-forchristmas.co.uk.

Tree lights did not cause deaths

THE fire that caused the deaths of a mother and her young daughter was not caused by the lights on their Christmas tree, police have confirmed.

Theresa Dunn and her nine-year-old daughter Emily died in the blaze at their home in Quern Road, Deal yesterday.

More than 20 firefighters rushed to the scene at around 5.45am. They were able to extinguish the flames, but when inspecting the two-storey house they found the bodies of the mother and daughter.

There had been reports it was caused by faulty Christmas tree lights, but a Kent police spokeswoman said that was not the case. She added: "The cause is still being investigated and we are looking at a possible electrical source."

Police forensics officers are assisting the fire service with their investigation.

Anyone with any information is asked to contact Kent police on 01304 240055.

Churchill loses cancer battle

THE granddaughter of Sir Winston Churchill has died on the same day her son was sentenced for drugs charges in Australia.

Arabella Spencer Churchill died aged 58 at her home in Glastonbury, Somerset on Thursday after a lengthy battle with pancreatic cancer.

On the same day, her 34-year-old son Nicholas Jake Barton was sentenced to at least 20 months in jail for his part in the supply of £6.5 million of Ecstasy tablets.

The drugs were found at a property Barton had sublet in Sydney. The sentence was backdated to Barton's arrest earlier this year and he is eligible for parole in February.

Ms Spencer Churchill was expected to live until April and Judge Colin Charteris had said the sentence was a chance to "temper justice with mercy", giving Barton the opportunity to visit her before she died.

Man dies in custody of police

A MAN has died in custody in Ashford police station.

The 71-year-old man, who has not been named, became unwell and collapsed shortly after officers took him into custody on Thursday, said police.

He was taken by ambulance to the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford and was later pronounced dead.

Kent Police initially referred the case to the Independent Police Complaints Commission to look into.

But it was later handed back to Kent Police to investigate.

The spokesman said the man's next of kin have been informed.

He said a post mortem had been held and an inquest would be opened.

Christmas is coming

The head of the Anglican church and some of the county's most prominent Christian leaders offer their special Christmas messages to the readers of Kent on Sunday

GOD so loved the world that he gave his only son. It's one of the best-known and best-loved verses of the whole bible, and it's often in people's minds around Christmas.

For a lot of people indeed it's so familiar that they miss how startling it is.

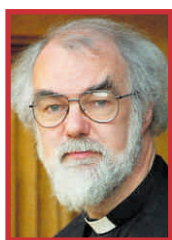

God really loved the world, not just a bit of it, not only the good people and the nice things, but the whole world; the whole universe of stars and silk worms and electrons, and human beings.

And the result of his love was action – he didn't sit there feeling good, enjoying a pleasant emotion, but stepped into the world so that his love would make a difference. And his action involved a great cost as real love so often does.

In recent weeks, with the discussions around the Bali conference on climate change and the rising levels of concern about how our environment generally is being reshaped by our human habits of consumption, it would have been good to hear, from time to time, a reminder that this world, this material world whose stability and welfare seems so threatened, is a world that God loves.

And if God loves it, why don't we? Or at least, why don't we act as if we did? If

By
DR ROWAN WILLIAMS
the Archbishop of Canterbury

Christmas reminds us of how God sees the whole of our world, not just human beings, but the whole physical universe of which they are an inseparable part, it should remind us that we're called to reflect that love, and above all to act in a way that shows it clearly even though this will mean sacrifice.

But what strengthens us to face this is the simple fact we started from – we are loved, we are object of God's delight and joy, and our love for creation as well for each other is the overflowing of this joy.

So may you all sense something of God's own delight this Christmas, his joy in the world he has made, the world he's constantly nurturing and drawing forward in love.

A very happy and blessed Christmas to all of you.

THE promise of the coming of Jesus is like the coming of light to darkness.

When we feel we have been let down by those who love or protect us, then Jesus appears as the true shepherd or pastor of his people.

He knows his flock and is known by them. He has compassion on those left without a shepherd and draws them to himself.

Jesus said his Kingdom is not of this world. He was an ordinary person from an ordinary family living at an extraordinary time in history and yet no one has encountered God so close up as they did in Jesus.

This is why we continue to celebrate Christmas.

In Jesus, God is with us to heal, encourage and transform.

The miracle is that the promised King who came on Christmas Day still comes today.

You can meet him by reading the Bible, as Christians gather to break bread and drink wine together; you can meet him through

By
DR MICHAEL NAZIR-ALI
the Bishop of Rochester another person and, of course, he discloses himself directly to us.

Of course, we cannot separate Christmas from Good Friday and Easter.

When we have done our worst, when the world wants to self-destruct, we find that God is saviour and redeemer.

Praise be to God for the wideness of his mercy, but let us begin with ourselves.

At this Christmas time, is the promise of Jesus becoming real in our lives?

Let us pray that the promised one will come this Christmas and throughout the coming year.

By
ROBERT WILLIS
the Dean of Canterbury

if there is a sense that all our preparations will not be ready by Christmas Day.

The celebrations and the giving and receiving of Christmas time will remind us of God's sharing of our human life 2,000 years ago when Christ was born.

The lessons and carols of Christmas assure us that God is still on our side whatever the problems we have to face.

May you and all your family have a joyful Christmas and a happy New Year.

ASW workers to get pension compensation in £2.9bn fund

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

NOT long after the collapse of Allied Steel and Wire in April 2002, steelworkers whose pensions shared the firm's fate met with a government minister.

It was a gloomy meeting with the then Pensions Minister Ian McCartney. When they asked him what the Government could do to help, he was blunt.

"I can offer you little hope," he told them. "In fact, I can offer very little hope at all."

Andrew Parr, 63, from Minster on the Isle of Sheppey, was one of the former ASW steelworkers who heard Mr McCartney's bleak assessment. This week, he recounted the minister's words after the Government finally bowed to pressure and agreed to fund a £2.9 billion compensation package.

The cash, announced by Work and Pensions Secretary Peter Hain on Monday, will benefit hundreds of workers left without their pensions when ASW's Sheerness and Cardiff plants went bust, as well as thousands more across the country in similar circumstances.

But the victory was hard won.

Former steelworkers from Kent, including Mr Parr, set up the Pensions Action Group with the help of pensions consultant Dr Ros Altmann, to spearhead a national campaign.

They have met with successive ministers, mounted an all-night vigil in Whitehall opposite Downing Street and even stripped off at several Labour and Tory party conferences.

When the news they have been waiting for the last five years finally came this week, it was a shock.

Understanding

The latest media reports suggested Prime Minister Gordon Brown had blocked any rescue package.

Speculation was rife he had fallen out with Mr Hain and Pensions Minister Mike O'Brien over the compensation plans that have now been approved.

However, the ministers this week announced that they would restore 90 per cent of pensions lost by about 140,000 people whose employers went bust.

Former ASW worker, John Hayter, from Herne Bay, was angry the Government is not providing 100 per cent compensation and that it will not be index linked. He told Kent on Sunday: "This is not justice at all."

For Mr Parr, who was due to retire a year ago, the announcement was a welcome one – but he remains unimpressed with the way Mr Brown has treated the pensioners, as the nation's premier and, before that, its iron-fisted Chancellor.

"Our understanding is this scheme is the hard work of Peter Hain and Mike O'Brien," said Mr Parr. "It's been fought all the way against Gordon Brown."

Mr Parr added: "We haven't got 100 per cent and no doubt there will be people who say we should have fought on for 100 per cent, but it was politically the realistic solution."

He will now receive about £10,000 a year

STANDING PROUD: ASW workers protest over the Government's lack of help earlier this year of the £12,200 pension he was originally due.

Campaigners plan to have a party next year to celebrate the victory. It will be a moment many, including Mr Parr, were beginning to think they would never see.

"When we first started in 2002, I thought the problem would be solved very quickly," he said. "(But) it seemed the Government wasn't prepared to admit the legislation was bad. A year or so ago I began to get down about it and think we were fighting for nothing, but now it's come as a very pleasant surprise."

When the full implications for his pension hit home in 2002, Mr Parr and other campaigners were forced to adjust to a life under the media spotlight.

He thanked Kent on Sunday for publicising the pensioners' battle.

"The support from the media has been one of the things that has helped to embarrass the Government and win it," he said.

"Without the support the press has given we wouldn't have got anywhere."

As with Mr Parr, this week's announcement was a bittersweet moment for his local MP Derek Wyatt.

The Labour member for Sittingbourne and Sheppey said he has devoted more time to the campaign than any other issue during his decade as a MP, yet received hate mail from many former ASW workers after he voted against proposals to reimburse them in July.

Mr Wyatt and other MPs in the House of Commons opposed an amendment to the Pensions Bill, which he felt was unworkable.

This week, Mr Wyatt welcomed the new compensation deal, telling this newspaper: "It's taken five years, but we've got there. I'm delighted."

Mr Wyatt said many pensioners became disillusioned with the political process after the Government rejected a damning report by the Parliamentary Ombudsman Ann Abraham on the issue. Published in March 2006, it found the Government guilty of maladministration.

"Why we couldn't just accept the view of the Ombudsman – I think that was just damaging," said Mr Wyatt.

LONG WAIT: Andrew Parr did not think he would ever see any money

Festive hope for children at Caldecott Foundation

CARERS at a Kent children's home are working hard to put the magic back into Christmas for more than 40 youngsters who have suffered cruelty and mistreatment, writes Jenna Pudelek.

The Caldecott Foundation in Smeeth, near Ashford, provides a home and schooling for children aged five to 16 years old who are known to be among the three per cent most damaged children in the UK.

Pauline Winlow, head of care at the home, said: "Everyone works extra hard to ensure the children have a day to remember."

She said Christmas was a time of "mixed emotions" for the children.

Although they have been rescued from their terrifying pasts the emotional wounds take a long time to heal.

But there is plenty of laughter and fun at this time of year and already some children have been taken to London to see the musical We Will Rock You, she said.

Others enjoyed the panto Aladdin at the Marlowe Theatre in Canterbury.

The youngsters sit down to a traditional turkey lunch on Christmas Day with 40 staff to offer care and support – and help unwrap all their presents.

Businessman Lloyd James, from near Ashford, has adopted Caldecott as one of his main charities for 2008.

A Christmas party was held at Boys Hall, Mr James' 17th century Jacobean manor house, for the younger children to celebrate.

BENEATH the Garden of England lie the remains of past civilisations from the earliest period of human history to the emergence of the Kingdom of Kent and beyond.

The archaeological richness of the county is explored in a new book that reveals how each new development in Kent, both major and minor, brings us closer to the past.

The Archaeology of Kent to AD 800 is edited by John Williams, who is head of heritage conservation at Kent County Council.

He said archaeology was being discovered everywhere the growth agenda has an impact.

"We have been able to revise our story and get it up to date but the archaeological work is ongoing and we will continue to get major new contributions to the story of Kent."

"Sites are coming up all the time – even since the book has been published there have been some wonderful finds."

"At the A2 south of Gravesend, two very rich early Roman graves were discovered and there were some prehistoric field systems and Anglo-Saxon remains at Ebbsfleet."

Discoveries

Part of Mr Williams' job at KCC is to ensure the county's archaeological heritage is safeguarded and investigated through the planning process.

With 160,000 new homes planned for the Thames Gateway and areas including Ashford and Maidstone undergoing major growth, he has his work cut out.

Mr Williams told how Kent's archaeology is unique because of the county's proximity to mainland Europe.

Britain used to be a peninsula with the North Downs continuing uninterrupted into northern France. During later periods of prehistory and carrying on into modern time, links across the Channel have continued with the arrival of the Romans and the Normans.

"Kent is one of the key places. There were a lot of Stone Age discoveries in North Kent on the farmland near the gravel of the Thames," he said.

Swanscombe was home to the oldest human remains in the country until a recent find in Sussex. The skull was from a woman believed to be 400,000 years old.

Iron Age, Roman and Anglo-Saxon discoveries have been made in Canterbury, which has layers of past generations beneath the foundations of modern stores.

The redevelopment of the Whitefriars shopping centre from 2000 to 2003 allowed archaeologists to carry out a large-scale excavation of medieval and Roman Canterbury.

Jewellery and personal items dating from Anglo-Saxon times show that Kentish fashions in the sixth to seventh century were a fusion of Scandinavian forms and other

Hidden past that's being uncovered every day

Continental modes of decoration.

The use and availability of luxury materials marks out Kent from the rest of England, said Mr Williams.

Pendants found in grave in Sibbertswold near Dover include two imported gold coins, garnet and amethyst cabochons, which are gem stones that have been shaped and polished, and decorated millefiori – or coloured – glass.

The pendants and necklaces found unearthed would not look out of place adorning a modern woman, but they are more than 1,300 years old.

Mr Williams said: "The book offers something for both those with a real interest in archaeology and it is hoped that people with a more general interest in Kent and its past will be attracted by it.

"The joy is its accessibility and that is what we were aiming for."

The book is packed full of colour illustrations and accurate drawings that recreate archaeological sites and digs.

Charity backs call for dementia help groups

A CONSULTANT psychiatrist is calling on his colleagues in Kent to provide extra support for people with dementia.

Dr Satvir Singh has set up a self-help group for his patients in Shepway.

He said the group was helping to arrest the symptoms and devastating effects of diseases like Alzheimer's and depression.

His calls have been backed by the national charity, the Alzheimer's Society.

Clive Evers, the society's director of knowledge management, said: "Staying active and spending time with friends and families is crucial to people with dementia and their carers."

Isolated

"It is encouraging to hear about an old-age psychiatrist developing support networks for people with dementia and their carers."

"There are 700,000 people [in the UK] living with the condition, millions more carers and these numbers are continuing to rise."

Dr Singh said that group members had already shown signs of improvement.

Such claims are backed by the findings of a study published in The Lancet medical journal which showed that socialising with family and friends could reduce the effects of Alzheimer's disease.

Dr Singh said: "I would like to see groups set up everywhere."

"I believe they should be widely available – I would call on other consultants to take the lead and set up these kinds of groups."

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

"It is not time consuming – it is only once a month – and it gives the patients so many benefits."

The group also helps elderly people with depression and anxiety who feel isolated and have difficulties socialising.

"The aim was to provide a group so that people with similar problems were not alone and were sharing their concerns and also becoming part of a small group."

"The outcome is that people are meeting up and developing friendships," Dr Singh said.

There are now around 29 members, including carers who the psychiatrist said also benefited from getting together socially.

The Hythe Imperial Hotel in Hythe, where the group meets, provides lunch and coffee for a discounted price.

Emma Ransley, a manager at the hotel, said: "We support the local community in any way we can and we are happy to help. They enjoyed Christmas lunch this week and we are glad it's been such a success."

Dr Singh said: "At the lunch the patients spoke about how wonderful they felt."

"It does not matter what mental health disorder they have, people must not be excluded from normal surroundings and activities."

He created the group after many of the outpatients attending a clinic he was running in Hythe said they felt lonely.

They did not want to go to groups run by Age Concern or residential nursing homes because they did not feel their symptoms were far enough advanced.

"With early dementia, time is the first thing that goes and then short-term memory. But they have the same personality and the ability to wash and dress themselves," said the doctor.

"When it is advanced, people cannot wash themselves, they lose bladder control and do not know where they are, forget their name or even that they have had children."

Fears

"It can be very frightening to see a person in the last stages. It makes them demoralised and fearful that they may end up like that," Dr Singh said.

Fearing their condition would decline and deteriorate was terrifying for patients and the group was focused on sharing those fears but also enjoying friendships.

Alzheimer's disease, which has no cure, has affected a number of people in the public eye including the novelist Iris Murdoch.

The much-loved author Terry Pratchett, 59, announced last week that he had a form of early Alzheimer's disease.

In a statement called 'An Embuggerance', Pratchett said he was taking the news "fairly philosophically down here and possibly with a mild optimism".

The 'Fleming Man' spy whose story is coming in from the cold at last

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

AFTER Antony Terry's death in 1992, Judith Lenart found herself sitting at her stepfather's desk, arranging his funeral.

She came across a bundle of letters, which included a file marked 'Fleming'.

Inside was a series of handwritten correspondence from Ian Fleming, the creator of James Bond.

Reading through the letters, suspicion arose within her. Had her stepfather been a spy?

And so began an investigation into the background of a man who was at times a war hero, a foreign correspondent and, it seems, and agent for MI6.

Her painstaking inquiries led to her writing a book, now published, called Berlin to Bond and Beyond - The Story of a Fleming Man.

It tells how Terry had been recruited by Fleming as an intelligence officer and posted to various European countries under the guise of a foreign correspondent with the Sunday Times.

Adventure

Fleming ran an intelligence agency called Mercury which used foreign correspondents working for the Sunday Times' parent company Kemsley Newspapers, for which he was foreign manager, as spies.

The former SIS and MI6 agent Anthony Cavendish described the relationship in his book Inside Intelligence. He wrote: "At the end of the war a number of MI6 agents were sent abroad under the cover of newspapermen. Indeed the Kemsley Press allowed many of their foreign correspondents to cooperate with MI6 and even took on MI6 operatives as foreign correspondents."

Fleming lived for a period in St Margaret's Bay in a house he bought from his friend Noel Coward, who, it was revealed recently, also acted as a spy for the British in Europe and America.

While some readers believe the character of Bond was largely based on Terry, Miss Lenart claimed his influence was more keenly felt in Fleming's more peripheral characters.

She told Kent on Sunday: "I see Antony Terry more as the sort of person who was helping Bond, rather than Bond himself."

Ian Fleming

"He would have been an authority who James Bond could rely on to know the scene and organise the right meetings in the right places. Like the journalist figure who helps Bond when he has his Japanese adventure in You Only Live Twice. That was Antony. Bond was much more Fleming himself."

"If you think of a spy as somebody on the payroll I don't think it would be fair to label him that, but if you think of a spy as someone who has connections to intelligence agencies and provides them with information and, on occasion, gets information in return then I'd say that's a pretty accurate description of Antony."

Miss Lenart's late mother Edith started seeing Terry in 1972 when they were both living in Paris; they married in 1985 and moved to New Zealand.

She did not know if her mother ever knew the full extent of her husband's work. But, with hindsight, she said there were clues that she probably did.

"I honestly don't know what my mother knew," said Miss Lenart. "When I became more aware of his background, certain comments my mother had made to me made sense when they seemed innocuous at the time."

"She certainly knew he had a past in intelligence, but did she know he was still actively engaged right up until the day he died? I'm not sure."

When going through the letters, it was only when she found correspondence with a man called Anthony Duvall that she realised Terry was a spy.

"It became clear he was the intermediary between Antony and MI6, he was organising the contacts in New Zealand. It seems to me like Antony never had a direct thing where he rang up the firm in London, at least not since the 1950s when his role as a full-time operative came to an end."

"I think he was in contact always through somebody else, and Anthony Duvall was one of those people."

Finding the letters inspired Miss Lenart to tell Terry's story in a book.

Born in London in 1913, he spent much of his early life in Berlin where his father worked at the British Consulate, learning German fluently in the process.

After a stint as a junior reporter on the London-based Sunday Dispatch, he volunteered for active service at the start of World War Two and was drafted into the intelligence service. He was made a lieutenant and put his language skills to good use interrogating German prisoners of war.

He was awarded the Military Cross for his actions in St Nazaire, France, and in German prisoner of war camps.

Immediately after the war he took part in the search and arrest of Nazi war criminals all over Europe.

In 1947 he started working for Fleming at Kemsley Newspapers and it is at this time Miss Lenart claims his spy work began.

He was posted to a number of European cities, including Berlin, Budapest and Vienna, as a foreign correspondent.

After the wedding in 1985, Terry moved to Edith's native New Zealand, apparently to be closer to her children.

Churchill

In 1988, Wellington Confidential published an article claiming Terry's presence in New Zealand was "certain evidence of the rage Whitehall is maintaining over New Zealand's nuclear-free defence policy". He denied the story, claiming he had not worked in intelligence since 1949.

Miss Lenart refuted this, and claimed Terry had been working part-time for MI6 right up until his death, meeting a go-between in Wellington on a regular basis.

Private Eye also published an article about Terry in 1992 suggesting he may have had ulterior motives for being in New Zealand. Despite an angry letter in response from the subject, the satirical publication did not print an apology.

Fleming had been recruited to work in naval intelligence during World War Two, rising to the rank of commander.

He was involved in the planning of many military operations, and it has been suggested he was behind the plan to lure Rudolph Hess to Scotland in May, 1941, for talks with Winston Churchill.

One of the letters Miss Lenart uncovered was from Fleming in 1963, in which he described Terry as "a good friend, and one of the finest foreign correspondents I have ever known - and I mean it".

Miss Lenart said Fleming had been impressed with the young Mr Terry because he saw him as "a risk taker".

"I think Ian thought that, but I wouldn't describe him as that," Miss Lenart added.

"He was a man who had little regard for his own personal safety. When he was in Budapest during the uprising in 1956 he would wander around in the street with Russian tanks just to see if a guy had a bazooka or not.

"When he got the Military Cross he had been running around in a German-occupied place with a handgun and had not been at all worried about his own safety."

Terry proved a valuable source for Fleming when he was writing the Bond books, advising him about German V2 rockets for Moonraker and details of Berlin for The Living Daylights.

Having pieced together her stepfather's life

Picture: SCHAFHANS, BOWN

like "a vast jigsaw" from the letters, Miss Lenart set about finding a publisher.

She posted a copy of the manuscript to former British intelligence officer Geoffrey Elliott, author of I Spy and co-author of Secret Classrooms: An Untold Story of the Cold War, whom she knew to have connections at MI6, to check its veracity.

Mr Elliott came back to her with only minor changes and asked for some addresses to be removed.

Flyover to be demolished

THE CHATHAM flyover will be demolished and replaced with a £5 million bus station.

Medway Council's cabinet approved the plans for the Sir John Hawkins flyover on Tuesday.

The decision ended months of debate over the location of the new bus station.

The flyover was closed when Chatham's two-way road system was launched in September 2006.

It was reopened three months ago but the council said it has not eased traffic congestion in the town.

Protestors turn up heat on Kingsnorth

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

ENVIRONMENTALISTS have warned that building a new coal-fired power station in Kent would mean the Prime Minister has "surrendered" on carbon emissions targets.

Plans by energy company E.ON to replace the four-unit coal-fired power station at Kingsnorth with a new two-unit one are currently being considered by Medway Council. Should it support the plans, they would then go to the Government for ultimate approval next year and the plant could be operational by 2012 or 2013.

More than 9,000 people have objected to the project.

In a letter to The Independent newspaper, John Sauven, executive director of Greenpeace UK, warned Britain would not be able to meet its environmental targets if Kingsnorth was given the go-ahead.

He wrote: "Giving the green light to Kingsnorth – and other stations – will lock Britain into huge carbon emissions for decades and signal Mr Brown's surrender on the 80 per cent target [for cutting emissions by 2050]."

"This generation of coal-fired power stations will account for half of Britain's permissible carbon emissions in 2050 if Mr Brown goes for an 80 per cent target."

"The hope that Kingsnorth will be

HEAT: Gordon Brown is under pressure over plans to replace Kingsnorth

'ready' to adopt carbon capture and storage (CCS) technology in the future is a triumph of hope over experience."

In October, activists staged a protest at the site, with several climbing up the 200ft smoke stack and chaining themselves to the station's conveyor belt.

Mr Sauven added: "The irony is that last month, Mr Brown restated his commitment to meet the EU target of producing 20 per cent of all our energy from renewable sources by 2020. If Britain meets this target, we would never need dinosaurs like Kingsnorth."

Emily Highmore, spokeswoman for E.ON, said the new Kingsnorth station would produce two million tons of carbon dioxide less every year than the existing plant.

She said: "That is equal to taking half a million cars off UK roads every year.

"Kingsnorth will be 20 per cent more efficient than existing plants. That is a significant amount."

"We need a mix of power, including coal-fired and gas-fired power stations, renewable technologies and new nuclear technologies. There is no one answer."

Miss Highmore insisted the new station would be ready for CCS technology to be installed when it is available. She also said heat produced by the new station could be used to heat 50,000 new homes in what she called a 'direct heating scheme'.

It would also produce electricity for around 1.5 million homes.

ASHFORD and its surrounding areas could be "sullied by ill-considered, poorly executed development on a massive scale", according to a damning new report.

At least 31,000 homes and 28,000 jobs are planned for the area by 2031, virtually doubling the size of the town.

The report by the Campaign to Protect Rural England (CPRE) warned that "the same old town planning mistakes of the past risk being repeated".

Dr Hilary Newport, director of CPRE Kent, said the development had the potential to make Ashford "an exemplar" in how to build sustainable 21st century communities but raised fears that the project could be losing its way.

Housing

She said the group had "major concerns" about infrastructure, jobs and housing.

Dr Newport said: "We must push for the creation of a thriving, energetic town, not a commuter dormitory which relies on the job markets of London or beyond."

"The growth in the number of jobs in Ashford is falling far short of the growth in its homes. Worse still, those jobs that are being created appear to focus heavily on the retail sector, rather than the high skill, high value professions that Ashford needs to create a thriving economy."

She also pointed to the abandonment of the plan to build a new Discovery Centre as "an early symptom of the widening gap between aspiration and achievement".

According to the report's conclusion, the CPRE still "wholeheartedly believes" that Ashford has the potential to grow in an economically and environmentally sustainable way.

However, it warned: "With every day that passes development is taking place in the town far below the often excellent standards which are promoted in the Sustainable Communities Plan and related documents. If this situation persists... the same old town planning mistakes of the past risk being repeated."

Cllr Paul Clokie, leader of Ashford Borough Council and regeneration quango Ashford's Future, said he was confident the plan would produce homes that people wanted to live in.

He said: "It is never going to be easy planning to double the size of a town but we have taken a community-based approach to our masterplanning to ensure Ashford has quality places that local people have helped to design."

However, Cllr Clokie questioned the report's figures and insisted job creation was keeping up with housing provision.

He said investors continued to be attracted to the town and not only in the retail sector, and cited Eureka Park and the forthcoming County Square site as examples of places where jobs are being created.

Boy George's homecoming tour

BOY George is to perform two shows in Kent as part of his new UK tour.

The 46-year-old singer, who comes from Eltham, takes his Songs That Make You Dance And Cry show to Dartford and Margate in February.

Promoters say the show will include his best-known Culture Club and solo hits and some new songs.

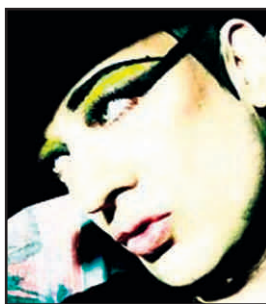

The singer, whose real name is George Alan O'Dowd, rose to fame in the early 1980s after the hit Do You Really Want To Hurt Me?

The band, part of the New Romantic movement, was for a while one of the most popular in the world and sold millions of records.

A spokesman for the artist said: "Boy George's unique vocals are instantly recognisable and have been responsible for the sale of millions of albums worldwide."

"The man whose unique style has always been as important as his music and whose clever, witty responses to boorish questions have in turn thrilled and horrified his huge audience, has remained in the public eye for 25 years; his international career as DJ and musician, his fashion label B-Rude and his colourful off-stage life have, it could be argued, kept some newspapers in business for a long time."

WIN a festive food and wine hamper from Bluewater's Christmas market and fair

THIS is the last weekend of Bluewater's traditional Christmas market and fair. Located in the Water Circus at Bluewater, the fair is a traditional winter wonderland with log cabin stalls selling Christmas gifts, fine foods and wines.

Bluewater's Christmas market and fair contains festive delights that include the Britain's biggest Christmas tree, traditional carousel, Kent's finest carol singers, Bluewater's biggest ever Santa's grotto and a host of other seasonal activities to make Christmas truly magical.

The Christmas market contains more than 70 traditional log cabin stalls offering shoppers unique seasonal gift ideas which will include speciality wine merchants, delectable food delights, handmade wooden toys, unusual gifts and imaginative home accessories.

Jean-Christophe Novelli also has his own stall selling calendars, fine food and wines and cookery courses at the Novelli Academy, located in a cosy, beamed, 14th century farmhouse in Hertfordshire.

If that's not enough, then Bluewater's Christmas Market is so unique that real snow effects will fall on the hour, creating a truly perfect white Christmas.

Standing tall above the Christmas market is Britain's biggest Christmas tree standing at 81 feet tall, the height of six double-decker buses on top of each other, providing a stunning focal point for the festivities.

Santa and his elves are also nestled cosily inside their log cabin grotto waiting to hear children's Christmas wishes and the traditional carousel is sure to provide them with endless excitement.

Why not bring the children down to this winter wonderland for a photo with Santa or to stroke a real reindeer?

Three lucky winners will each receive a festive hamper full of the best products from Bluewater's Christmas market and fair.

TEN people were arrested for drink driving over the weekend. The arrests came as part of the Safer Winter campaign, in which police are conducting regular stop checks to catch motorists driving whilst under the influence. Out of the 10 arrested, six have been charged and two have been bailed pending further inquiries. These latest figures bring the number of people arrested for drink driving in mid Kent to 41 since the campaign was launched at the start of this month. Inspector Geoff Wyatt, of Kent Police, said: "Drinking and driving wrecks lives."

On yer trike, mush

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

TEARING through the countryside on a trike pulled by a team of huskies is an experience both animal lovers and adrenaline junkies would love.

It may seem more suited to an alpine adventure, but husky racing can be enjoyed at an animal rescue park in Kent.

Jonny Ames is the centre manager at Eagle Heights near Eynsford, and owner of the Husky Experience.

He said: "I found out about husky racing after we got offered a couple of rescue dogs and when we got them we did a bit of driving. Then I got the idea of doing rides."

Since its launch two years ago, the venture has grown in popularity and the 21-year-old said weekends are fully booked until the end of the season in February.

Roaring success

'Mushers' – the name given to someone who drives a team of dogs – can tear around the four-mile course with an instructor taking in the beautiful views over the county.

Or, and Mr Ames said this was not for the faint hearted, people could learn the art of mushing and take control of the trike themselves.

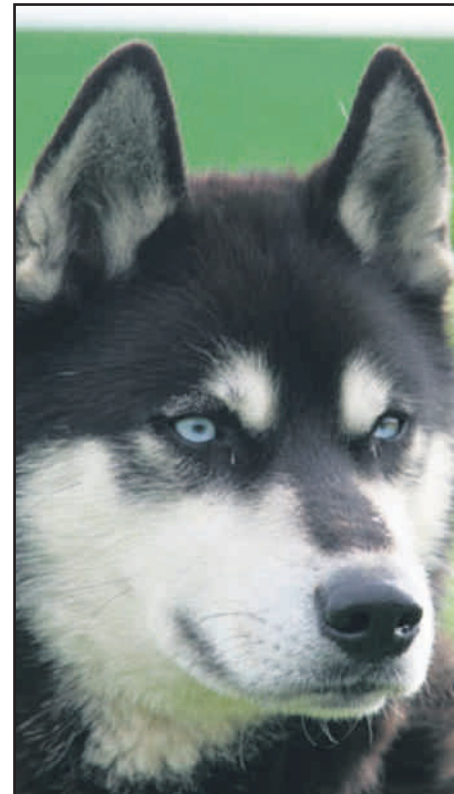

Two teams go around the track at one time and Mr Ames said he plans to an extra ride a day to meet demand.

He added: "The dogs love it because they love to run."

Mr Ames' father Alan is the director of the animal refuge centre, which he set up 11 years ago.

Proud of the success of his son's venture, he told this newspaper: "I said 'if you can come up with a good idea for the park then I'll help you'. He came up with the huskies and it's been a roaring success. He grew up with animals."

"We used to have eagles in the back garden before I set up this place."

HOWL: Huskies take a lot of hard work if they are successfully to be kept as pets

There are 20 huskies at the centre. Most are likely to arrive from centres like Battersea Dogs Home.

He added: "A lot of people don't realise what they are taking on. [The dogs are] very lively and they can trash people's houses if they are left on their own."

"They are the next best thing to a wolf – they howl and it's their nearest relative."

Improving travelling in Kent

Your one-stop guide to information and advice on travelling

Traffic Management Centre

Keeping Kent moving in the face of growing road traffic is a huge challenge, but one that we're fully committed to. A major part of our strategy to manage the county's increasing traffic volume is our state-of-the-art Traffic Management Centre (TMC) in Maidstone.

The TMC was launched in November 2006 with one objective: 'Keep Kent moving'. It's currently being manned seven days a week in the run up to Christmas and this may be extended permanently as the centre is proving so valuable in reducing congestion.

At the centre we use a combination of CCTV, Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) and Variable Message Signs (VMS) to monitor traffic flow and journey times and to keep commuters informed of the traffic status around the county. We also coordinate traffic signals to reduce congestion, particularly when incidents and crashes occur. By collecting information about the status of the road network and by monitoring congestion points we can take real time action to minimise disruption.

Our systems also allow us to plan for future events and we have already been involved with major events including the Tour de France. Our role is to provide information about road closures or possible congestion using the Variable Message Signs around Maidstone to give drivers the information they need to keep moving.

We are also using the VMS to work with organisations such as Kent Police to display messages from the current Drink Drive Campaign.

We don't keep all this information to ourselves though – you can check out the latest road information by logging on to the Traffic and Travel website at www.kent.gov.uk/travel

Our current operation is focused around Maidstone, but it is being extended to cover other parts of Kent to make journey times better for everyone.

Keeping Count

You may have seen what looks like a garden hose stretched across the road when you are driving around Kent and wondered what it is. It's actually a method that helps Kent Highway Services carry out surveys of the roads each year. The information we collect helps us monitor how the roads are being used and can include the numbers and types of vehicles making specific movements, vehicle speeds, and journey times between certain points.

Surveys are usually carried out automatically using either wire loops buried in the road surface, or those things that look like garden hoses stretched across the road, that are actually clever rubber tubes that record information. We also collect data manually using specially trained people positioned at the roadside.

So what's the point of the surveys? We use the data to identify and evaluate any existing problems on the road network such as congestion, excessive vehicle speeds and 'rat-running'.

We also use it to assess where problems may arise in the future.

In addition, we repeat a set of surveys each year in 14 towns across Kent and on a selection of the roads between them. We use this set of surveys to monitor the effectiveness of our transport schemes and policies, so we can continue our work to reduce congestion and keep Kent moving.

You can find out more about the work that we do by visiting our website at www.kent.gov.uk/highways

Calling all bikers!

We put a lot of time and effort into monitoring our road network, so we can identify any problems that could cause a safety hazard. However, we can't see everything all the time and because our monitoring vans are four-wheeled, it can mean that it's harder for us to identify problems that affect the motorcyclists out there.

That's why we're asking you to work with us, by telling us about any problems that you come across as you're riding around the county. If you spot things like a raised manhole cover, damaged road surface, or a damaged sign that you think needs attention, please tell us about it!

You can either call us on 08458 247 800 to report the problem, or log on to www.ridewithattitude.com and click on 'report a road'. If you use the website to report the problem, we will reply to you to let you know what we intend to do about it. Your report will also be posted on the website, so you and other riders can see what is being done.

To help us deal with the problem as quickly as possible, please tell us as much information as you can when reporting a problem, such as:

- The exact location of the problem, including the road name or number
- The size of the defect – this will help us to prioritise our work
- When did you find the defect and, if you know, how long has it been there?
- If the defect was as a result of another's actions, e.g. a sign knocked down during a crash, or mud/oil on the road, do you know who was responsible? If so, please let us know because they may need to help clear or remove the problem.

Together we can help to make Kent's roads safer for everyone.

Sustrans wins the public's support

Connect2, the Sustrans scheme, has won The Peoples £50 Million contest and we would like to thank everyone for their support.

This means that our three local projects, to make major improvements to walking and cycling in Kent, will benefit from a share of the funds.

So proud of Kent's youth

The Queen's representative has paid tribute to the young people of Kent in his annual Christmas message.

The Lord Lieutenant Allan Willett CMG said a major summer event at Maidstone had given a "totally positive" impression of today's youth.

Mr Willett said: "Celebrating youth achievement has been the Lieutenancy's main focus throughout the past year – and how worthwhile it proved to be.

Positive

"Inevitably the bad behaviour of a disaffected minority grabs public attention. But our major event at the County Showground, showcasing the activities of youth groups from every part of Kent, gave a totally positive view of the great majority of today's young people.

"I met selfless young carers, mentors, first-aiders, cadets and many others, all demonstrating good citizenship – and enjoying new friendships and a lot of fun in their youth organisations.

"They are our future, and through them

By PETER BOYES

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

our county will be in good hands."

Next year, the Lieutenancy will focus on the centenary of the Territorial Army and celebrate the service of past and present volunteer reservists of all the services.

There will be linked events at Penshurst, Chatham, Maidstone, Dover and elsewhere. These will culminate in a parade and thanksgiving service at Canterbury Cathedral to honour these volunteers who, said Mr Willett, "are truly twice a citizen".

He added: "Over the festive season some of them will be serving alongside the regulars on operations in Iraq, Afghanistan and elsewhere. Our prayers are with them – and especially with their families left behind in our care and yet often forgotten by the public.

"Our thoughts, too, are with the emergency services, those caring for others, and those who are ill or alone.

"I wish all Kent on Sunday readers a happy Christmas and a peaceful and prosperous New Year."

Listeners' favourite dies at 33

By PETER BOYES

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AWARD WINNER: Jonathan Witchell

TRIBUTES have been paid to an award-winning BBC Radio Kent reporter who has died at the young age of 33.

Jonathan Witchell, of Sevenoaks, passed away on Saturday following a short illness.

Paul Leaper, the managing editor of BBC Radio Kent, said: "This has been one of the hardest weeks in Radio Kent's history."

"Jonathan will be remembered as someone who loved Kent and loved radio."

"He had creative flair and scrupulous attention to detail. He was simply one of the station's best all-rounders."

"I know he'll be sorely missed by all his colleagues and listeners to BBC Radio Kent. Our hearts to go out to his family at this difficult time."

Mr Witchell joined BBC Radio Kent nearly 10 years ago as a broadcast journalist.

The corporation said he quickly became a firm favourite, gaining great affection from both listeners and colleagues.

Born and raised in Kent, he studied at Salford University before completing a Masters degree at Stirling University.

His broadcasting career began at Hospital Radio Bromley, followed by stints at BBC Radio Devon and BBC Radio Lincolnshire.

He joined BBC Radio Kent in 1998 and contributed to many of the station's programmes, working with Barbara Sturgeon, Paul James and Paul Harris, among others.

Mr Witchell's documentary about James Bond in Kent won him the accolade of Kent Broadcast Journalist of the Year in 2004.

Last year, Mr Witchell spent a year working with new journalists in Sri Lanka and producing reports for the BBC World Service.

This summer he worked on a programme with broadcasters Dave Cash and Johnnie Walker to mark the 40th anniversary of the abolition of pirate radio.

Mr Witchell, who was single, went into hospital with a stomach complaint. The cause of his death is as yet unknown.

Details of the funeral are being confirmed. However, if listeners wish to offer their condolences BBC Radio Kent will pass them on his family.

Write to BBC Radio Kent, The Great Hall, Mount Pleasant Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent, TN1 1QQ, or email radio.kent@bbc.co.uk.

Police 'losing support from Middle England'

POLICING targets are alienating the middle classes, according to the head of the Police Federation.

Jan Berry, whose organisation represents 140,000 rank-and-file officers in England and Wales, said police were persecuting Middle England to improve statistics.

The Kent Police chief inspector told the Telegraph: "We've got more people counting things than we've got out there doing things. I'm not against targets per se, but we have the wrong targets."

"People who are going at 35mph in a 30mph zone at two in the morning when there are no other cars on the road are committing an offence but not as much of an offence as those doing 35mph at 4pm when the schools are just coming out. Speeding tickets are a revenue raiser. I don't think that helps the public have trust in the police."

"Targets can be healthy provided there's a balance between quality and quantity. If a murder has the same number as the theft of a Mars bar, then there's something wrong with the system."

A Home Office spokeswoman defended the use of target-led policing.

She said: "While Government targets set the strategic direction for the police service, it is for forces to exercise discretion in balancing these targets against local priorities."

"Bringing criminals to justice is a core job for the police, but officers should not pursue detection numbers for numbers' sake if that means chasing minor misdemeanours at the expense of serious offenders."

"Government targets - announced in October - give much more prominence to tackling more serious crime, particularly the most serious violent crime."

Ms Berry, who joined the county constabulary in 1971, also reiterated the anger felt by police in the pay dispute with the Government.

A row broke out between police, including Kent's chief constable Michael Fuller, and the Government after the Home Office rejected an arbitration tribunal's recommendation that police should get a 2.5 per cent pay increase backdated to September.

War on terror

Ms Berry, who is 53, said Home Secretary Jacqui Smith should reverse her decision or resign.

Government documents leaked this week suggested the Home Secretary plotted the confrontation with the police because of the spiralling cost of the War on Terror.

The Home Office memo, leaked to the Mail on Sunday, said if Ms Smith asked the Treasury for more money to pay the police, it would undermine her request for more funding to fight terrorism.

The memo, from a senior civil servant in June, also said police pay was already high enough.

It said: "There is no real business case for a generous pay rise for the police this year. A constable is 36 per cent better paid than 10 years ago, and there are six applications for every police job, there are no recruitment and retention difficulties in policing (even in London), virtually uniquely in the public sector. Most police get a substantial increment each year and as well as their pay rise. We have a strong narrative to deploy publicly on all this if need be."

The memo said awarding the pay rise would undermine the Government's "strong line" on nurses' pay.

The Home Office spokeswoman added: "It is not our normal practice to comment on leaked documents but we have always been clear we faced difficult choices as part of the part of the bid for additional counter-terrorism funding and a tough negotiating position was necessary so as not to feed inflation."

A MAN has been jailed for three-and-a-half years after sexually grooming a 14-year-old girl and smuggling her abroad. Peter Willcox, of no fixed address, took the teenager to Greece from Dover in the boot of his car in July. The 49-year-old was arrested after they were spotted in Athens in August 2006. He was jailed at Canterbury Crown Court on Monday. Willcox has already served half of a two-year sentence in a Greek jail for child abduction. On returning to the UK he pleaded guilty to having sexual activity with a child. The court was told how the girl, who is now 16, became pregnant while she was in Greece with Willcox. Willcox's defence said that he had pleaded guilty at the earliest opportunity and had expressed remorse. The judge ordered him to sign the sex offenders' register.

KENT ON SUNDAY

COMMENT

Pension fighters win their battle

CAMPAIGNERS like Andrew Parr who refused to give up in their battle for compensation must be congratulated this week.

They never stopped fighting after losing pensions when their firms went bust.

Many of them had paid into compulsory schemes for decades, which they had been assured were 'guaranteed' and could never fail.

Instead, they were forced to work beyond their planned retirement age to win back what was rightfully theirs.

After years of refusing to bow to pressure and compensate the pensioners, the Government has finally delivered a deal which will give the workers 90 per cent of their pensions.

But it is hard to see why Gordon Brown doesn't just award them the whole lot.

It is penny pinching on a grand scale.

Happy Christmas

FOR most of us, Christmas will be a time when families and friends reunite to spend valuable time with each other.

Many people lead busy lives and do not always have the time to enjoy the company of loved ones.

At Christmas, which should be a time for reflection, make sure you make the effort to get along with those closest to you.

And spare a thought for those who have to spend Christmas alone.

To each and every one of you, Kent on Sunday wishes you a very Happy Christmas.

OPINION: Dreaming of Folkestone

ANDREA SCHLIEKER on how the town is inspiring artists

It seemed key to me that this should not be a one-off exhibition, but by repeating it every three years, Folkestone could demonstrate its ongoing commitment to furthering the debate about art in public places, and being taken seriously as a main player in the international art arena. The exhibition will include temporary as well as permanent works, so that over time a significant number of artworks will be accumulated here to maintain the focus on Folkestone as a major centre for cutting edge contemporary art.

I am delighted that we have succeeded in attracting some of the world's most exciting, renowned and emerging artists to take part in the Triennial.

The list includes this year's Turner Prize winner Mark Wallinger and fellow 2007 nominee Nathan Coley, former winner Jeremy Deller and Ivan and Heather Morison, who recently represented Wales at the Venice Biennale. There are a number of prominent UK artists who all have strong roots in the South East – like Tacita Dean, Adam Chodzko, Nils Norman, Langlands and Bell and Tracey Emin. And we are fortunate to be able to present artists who have played a pivotal role in the development of British Sculpture over the last 30 years, like Richard Wentworth, Richard Wilson and David Batchelor.

The artists came to visit Folkestone over the course of several months in the summer of 2006. These visits were an important test for the concept of the show: it was elating to see that each artist – whether they came from Los Angeles or Lodz, from Glasgow or Sarajevo – was enchanted by Folkestone. All took their cue from what they encountered here and what they felt was special about the place. And consequently, their proposals appear connected by a strong narrative element, as each articulates the past, present and future of Folkestone in imaginative and innovative ways.

Hence the title – Tales of Time and Space – in reference to, but a slight variation on, the collection of short stories and novellas by HG Wells. This seemed to appropriately encapsulate the exhibition's message.

The artists brought together for the Triennial work in a whole range of media – from sculpture to installation, performance to sound, and photography to film. Gone are the days when bronze and stone are the exclusive materials to be used for outside locations.

But however diverse they may be they share a strong track record or affinity towards making work that engages with a specific urban situation. Art in public places has changed quite radically over the years, and many artists now prefer direct interaction and collaboration with the community, rather than creating work in the isolation of the studio.

We are also developing an extensive education programme for schools across the district and we will offer themed walks and talks, designed so that everyone – even those most sceptical about contemporary art – might be able to relate to and enjoy the works.

We believe the Triennial will put Folkestone on the wider national and international cultural map.

The Folkestone Triennial, Tales of Time and Space, will be open for three months next summer from June 14, 2008.

• Andrea Schlieker is curator of the Folkestone Triennial.

Grammar pupils are a credit to us

After reading your article on "Great Class Divide" last Sunday where Martin Frey attacks grammar schools once again with his brilliant observation that fewer pupils are expelled from grammar schools – I was so outraged I felt compelled to write in. My son attends a Kent grammar school which includes children from a wide range of cultures and social backgrounds including children with special needs. A lot of the children come from some of the poorest surrounding boroughs and are not socially or financially advantaged contrary to popular belief. But the one thing they have in common is that they are all prepared to behave and work hard and give 100 per cent in order to achieve a decent future. I have absolutely no sympathy for the disruptive, antisocial jobs in our schools today who decide to get themselves expelled and make life a misery for their fellow students and who you now want to inflict on our grammar kids who want to work. It's a shame these children don't take an example from our grammar school pupils and knuckle down and get educated then they would have the same chance as anyone else, and people like Mr Frey could stop moaning on about how unfair the education system is because the only people to blame are themselves. So to Mr Frey and all you anti-grammar school campaigners I would like to say, get off your high horse, get your facts right and let grammar kids who are a credit to this society get on in peace instead of trying to bring everyone else down to your level. Mrs E Jones Sidcup

Don't penalise for hard work

Having read your front-page article, I feel I have to respond as a parent whose child sat the Medway test in November. My child attends a primary school where there are several highly disruptive pupils who 'attention seek' on a daily basis at the expense of the quiet child who wishes to work. It is the quiet children who in my opinion are the losers, the disruptive children often go out of their way to disturb the class and hence receive more of the teachers' and headteachers' time. The primary schools are loathe to remove the disruptive element as it does not reflect well on the school, help the child and in many cases the place will be filled by a troublesome child from another school. I consider myself working class – neither my husband or I were selected to attend grammar schools but both agree it is a marvellous opportunity for those who wish to pursue an academic route with others of a like mind, where a positive work ethos is encouraged and the teacher's time is spent helping those who really want to make the most of their education. My child was selected at the recent Medway test and we were extremely proud of what we feel was achieved through sheer hard work. Name and address supplied

The answer is simple: to succeed

Another Sunday, another screaming headline about evil grammar schools failing the downtrodden masses.

At least this time the class-war fool to whom you blithely choose to grant grotesque quantities of free publicity is saying that it's the poor grammar schools that are deficient in resources, namely disruptive morons, than the comprehensives. The reason why there are fewer exclusions from grammar schools? The pupils, the teachers, the parents and governors all have a single aim: to succeed. It's that simple. Paul Millgate Kent

Family search from Canada

I'm trying to locate any members of my grandfather's family still living in England. My grandfather was Ernest John (Jack) Brown born September 28, 1887 in Bromley, Kent. His parents were Frederick Brown – born 1851 in Worpleston, Surrey and Fanny Brooks – born 1851 in Edenbridge, Kent. Frederick was a signalman and then pointsman for a railway and Fanny was a grocer. Ernest had three sisters: Dorothea (Dolly), married to John Grantham and lived at one point in Devon. Ernest had at least two children, Nigel and Ann; Fanny Cecelia (Cissy), married, but don't know to who, possibly had a daughter Molly; and Ethel married to Frank Pentecost and lived in Maidstone and Sydenham – had at least one son John who was married with three children and was a clerk at Sydenham Station. Ernest ran away to sea, to the Merchant Marines, at about age 15. He came to Canada between 1901-1914. He was married on November 2, 1914 to Amelia Grantham Wilson. Anyone having any information about Ernest's siblings or parents can contact me at: 236 Hammond Road Winnipeg, Manitoba R3R 1M3 Canada email: bev-burton@hotmail.com Thanking you in advance for any assistance. ## Island housing growth is an unhealthy issue

I found it incredible that some of the residents on Sheppey were in favour of the proposed Queenborough Rushenden development. It might well encourage new jobs now they have the new Sheppey crossing, but and it is a big but, with 2,000 more houses there will be a minimum of 4,000 extra people. Where are these people going to go for their medical treatment? Swale already has an acute shortage of doctors and NHS dentists and no acute hospital. Some residents already travel from Sheppey to the Medway towns for NHS dentists and I have heard of one resident who still goes back to London to see her GP as she cannot find a suitable one for her needs on the island. The education system is also overstretched with hundreds of pupils being transported off the island to Sittingbourne, or beyond, everyday. Special needs children often have to travel for several hours each day to schools as far away as Ramsgate, often in taxis at great expense to the tax payer. When facilities are in place such as more GPs, medical services and mainstream and special needs schools to cater for the influx of new residents, it may well be a great place to live and work, but let's get the priorities right and put these in place before more houses. Jean Spain Sittingbourne

Supermarkets are taking over everything

Not a single voice seems to recognise the threat posed by supermarkets if left to their own devices. The supermarket is successful because it is the most professional, focused, profit and growth-driven business animal on the planet. Many businesses have already been exterminated but no-one seems to notice that we are paying more for our food. We are left with about five predatory giants who wage a ruthless war. In addition to food we now have clothes, toys, paperbacks, books, greetings cards, CDs, DVDs, white goods, barbecues, mobile phones, photographic services, garden products, pet products, paint, kitchen and household goods, chemists and pharmaceuticals, post office services and financial services. There has to be Governmental involvement and control. No market is safe from attack and conquest. Ian R Elliott Whitstable

Speed camera fans' double standards

Your reader James Mason writes to support MP Stephen Ladyman's comments that "speed cameras are necessary". Is this the same MP that had three speeding convictions and admits to using a radar detector? Only recently Chief Constable Meredydd Hughes, the head of road policing for Great Britain, was banned from driving, for doing 90mph in a 60mph limit while on holiday. This was the man who advocated more cameras and wanted them all hidden. All these people might lecture us, but that is only for their own career enhancement and a good pension at the end of it. This has nothing to do with real facts or truth. If, Mr Mason, you wish to believe all this twaddle, then go ahead, but like most sensible citizens, I gauge people by their actions not by their hypocritical rhetoric. Terry Hudson Herne Bay

IN MY VIEW

Jane Connolly

Country sounds

DON MESCALL
ZEBRA BAR, MAIDSTONE

I CONFESS to not being a country music fan, but only in the sense that I have never really listened to it.

When the opportunity came to meet singer/songwriter Don Mescall and watch him in action at Maidstone's Zebra Bar, I anticipated a pleasant enough evening with a competent musician. His biography was certainly impressive, with writing credits for the likes of Ronan Keating, Lulu, Frances Black and Brian McFadden.

The Irishman, now based in Folkestone, has made waves in the notoriously difficult Nashville songwriting community, so I expected some high quality stuff.

What I didn't expect was to be taken on an almost unbearable rollercoaster ride of emotions. As Mescall had stressed during our interview, and later on stage, all his lyrics were based on his own experiences.

Whether singing about the death of his father or the break-up of his marriage, the audience was acutely aware that Mescall was singing straight from the heart. This certainly gave his delicate and honest lyrics an added poignancy that occasionally brought tears to the eyes (alright, my eyes). A couple more drinks and I might have embarrassed myself.

Despite this, there was no mawkish air to the evening. Mescall was an engaging and warm host, whose banter between songs was completely free from doom and gloom. There did tend to be a solemn tone to the songs, such as the heartbreaking You Don't Love Me. But a ditty sung to his young daughter and the strangely uplifting End Of The Line reminded us all that for every shadow, there is light.

Mescall ended the evening – which, at three-and-a-half hours long, was tremendous value – with a beautiful and very personal song, dedicated to his new love. After musically exploring a turbulent life, the simple note of hope was the perfect finishing touch.

The young lady who provided support cannot be named for contractual reasons, but she had an incredible voice and huge charisma, which suggested she was a star in the making.

All in all, we spent a fantastic evening in the presence of two extraordinary talents and went home armed with CDs for further listening. Mescall does not appear to perform in Britain very often and I was glad to have caught him. The gig, organised by Maidstone-based Maverick magazine, was a triumph and I will certainly be back.

IMPRESSIVE: Mescall made waves in Nashville

CINEMA

ST TRINIAN'S (12A)

Girls just wanna have fun in Oliver Parker and Barnaby Thompson's revival of the naughty hockey stick-wielding minxes. St Trinian's is frothy and undemanding fun, interspersed with snappily edited montages set to songs by Shampoo, Sophie Ellis-Bextor and Girls Aloud. Stars Rupert Everett and Colin Firth.

ALVIN AND THE CHIPMUNKS (U)

Alvin And The Chipmunks treats its audience like fools, keeping dialogue to a minimum as the linear plot unfolds at a crawl with yawnsome predictability. Young viewers might giggle at the sight of one chipmunk noisily breaking wind in Dave's face, but laughs are few and far between.

ENCHANTED (PG)

Combining animation and live action, Enchanted has all the ingredients of a modern classic: great performances, rumbustious comic set pieces, a sprinkling of romance and just enough heartfelt sentiment to draw a goofy, contented grin. Stars Amy Adams, Patrick Dempsey, Susan Sarandon and Timothy Spall.

BEE MOVIE (U)

Co-written by Jerry Seinfeld, who also voices the lead character, computer-animated adventure Bee Movie is a fitfully amusing romp that peddles many obviously puns and gags: "A perfect report card – all b's!" Seinfeld brings his dry humour to his role while Renee Zellweger, Matthew Broderick and co offer lively support.

MR MAGORIUM'S WONDER EMPORIUM (U)

Written and directed by Zach Helm, Mr Magorium's Wonder Emporium unfolds in the form of a storybook narrated by a lonely nine-year-old boy called Eric (Zach Mills). Dustin Hoffman is instantly loveable as the wacky and wildly eccentric impresario and Natalie Portman brings depth to her role.

WE OWN THE NIGHT (15)

Director James Gray reunites with charismatic lead stars Joaquin Phoenix and Mark Wahlberg for this gritty account of betrayal and retribution, set against a backdrop of '80s New York street crime. We Own The Night takes more than an hour to accelerate out of first gear, finally sparking to life during a terrific car chase sequence in the rain.

THE GOLDEN COMPASS (PG)

Thirteen-year-old Dakota Blue Richards

ALVIN AND THE CHIPMUNKS: Unfortunately, laughs are few and far between from Brighton was plucked from obscurity to play the pivotal role of Lyra and she is terrific, holding her own against Nicole Kidman (in scene-stealing form) and a miasma of jaw-dropping special effects. The Golden Compass is an entertaining introduction to Philip Pullman's writing, festooned with dazzling action set pieces.

CODE NAME: THE CLEANER (PG)

Les Mayfield's misfiring and misconceived comedy, about an amnesiac who suspects he may be a CIA operative, is about as much fun as a pile of ironing. Leading man Cedric The Entertainer gurns furiously to camera and flings himself into the various set pieces with gusto. Code Name: The Cleaner splices comedy and action to disastrous effect, accomplishing neither genre with flair.

HITMAN (15)

A disappointing big screen version of the top-selling video game. Director Xavier Gens has recreated the mood of the digital universe. What it lacks is the adrenaline rush that comes from taking control of the enigmatic Agent 47 and interacting with the brutal, bloodthirsty criminal underworld that is his hunting ground.

FRED CLAUS (PG)

Packed with festive schmaltz, this film will make you feel nauseous. Vince

Vaughn stars in this modern day fairy-tale about the rivalry between Saint Nick (Paul Giamatti) and his misunderstood brother, Fred (Vaughn). Laughs are so thin on the ground, it's enough to bring out the Scrooge in you.

THE ASSASSINATION OF JESSE JAMES BY THE COWARD ROBERT FORD (15)

Brad Pitt stars as the outlaw James in this visually arresting and handsome drama, but it's the intense performance of Casey Affleck as Ford that will literally take your breath away. Gorgeous cinematography and breathtaking production design create some truly unforgettable images.

SHROOMS (18)

Paddy Breathnach tries his hand – with mixed fortunes – at a modern day horror film with a strong anti-drugs message. Shrooms is starved of originality, and characters are thinly sketched and deeply unlikeable, therefore completely dispensable.

THE DARJEELING LIMITED (15)

Wes Anderson directs Owen Wilson, Adrien Brody and Jason Schwartzman in this bittersweet valentine to brotherhood in the unlikely setting of a train heading across the deserts of Rajasthan. It's an absurdist road movie fuelled by the delightful rapport between the actors.

Enjoy our coastline

TAKE a break from the excesses of Christmas with a bracing stroll along Kent's beautiful 350-mile coastline.

As many people are busy with festive entertaining, it's the perfect time to enjoy the unique magic of the seaside in winter. With no crowds to contend with, walkers can experience the peace, quiet and natural beauty of Kent's coastal towns and villages.

Walking and cycling are great ways to get fit and work off those mince pies. The Cinque Ports Circuit, devised by the Maritime Heritage Trail and the Cyclists' Touring Club, links the historic Cinque Port towns as it passes through idyllic villages and country lanes, avoiding major roads and following designated cycle routes.

The Viking Coastal Trail takes in 29 miles of the Isle of Thanet peninsula, while the 160-mile Saxon Shore Way follows the coastline of 1,600 years ago. Children will love a visit to Dover Castle and the wartime tunnels as a detour from the Langdon Cliffs, overlooking the Straits of Dover.

Follow the River Medway to discover some exciting treasures, such as Upnor Castle, Chatham Historic Dockyard and Rochester's Guildhall Museum.

REVIEW ■ FOOD & DRINK

PIZZA PERFECT: The Strada restaurant in Canterbury punches well above its weight in terms of food, drink, décor and boasts unobtrusive and swift service

Sample the atmosphere of downtown New York

A SMALL corner of Lower Manhattan where Chinatown meets Little Italy is widely regarded as heaven for lovers of Roman cuisine as restaurant battles café and bistro for a temporary top of the food chain listing.

In fact, it's pizza perfect and I never thought I'd taste a better example of a piccante in my

RESTAURANT REVIEW

BY NICK AMES

future – well not unless I went right to the home of rustic, hearty Mediterranean food.

And I certainly never thought I would get anywhere near it right on my doorstep.

But on a Monday lunchtime the Strada restaurant in Canterbury at least managed to equal the tastes and atmosphere of downtown

New York on the day all Italians celebrate their culture – The Feast of San Gennaro.

My dining partner chose the Strada and, having never been there, I was not sure what to expect.

The restaurant itself is comfortable and the placings allowed us to talk freely and with a measure of intimacy which is sadly lacking in many similar establishments.

I ordered a bottled beer on arrival and it was on my table within seconds. A waitress gracefully poured the first glass of Soave for my partner to sample.

Complementary olives in a very attractive bowl completed the table setting.

Massive

For starters I sampled a polenta con funghi – roasted Parmesan with mixed mushrooms in a marjoram sauce.

Seated opposite, my friend opted for Insalata di Spinaci, which was a massive plateful.

It consisted of baby spinach leaves, sliced avocado and smoked pancetta bacon with Parmesan shavings, all tossed in a mustard dressing.

Both dishes were full of flavour, but subtle and light enough not to do anything but complement the main course.

The service was unobtrusive, but smart and swift as well.

The flow of wine and attention was just right to keep connection going and avoid those annoying pauses in conversation when hovering staff break the flow of a couple's evening – or in this case lunchtime.

So on to the main course.

We both opted for pizza – mine was a piccante with spicy Italian salami, which was crisp and full of tangy flavour. The meat was accompanied by red onions, olives, rocket, tomato and mozzarella.

My partner – after some contemplation – went for a Fiorentina.

Again spinach was to the fore for her – wilted and cooked with garlic.

Black pepper and mozzarella completed the flavour, which was further enhanced by tomato and a free-range egg.

The base was crisp and easily manageable and even a slightly messy eater such as myself was able to cut and consume with a degree of sophistication.

The desserts looked incredibly tempting but as it was back to work that afternoon for her (but not for me) we just had a coffee.

For a lunch – which really was a spur of the moment thing – the experience was far ahead of that one would normally expect of an Italian restaurant in a small city centre in the UK.

For people who appreciate taking good company to a very reasonably priced establishment, which punches well above its weight in terms of food, drink, décor and atmosphere, the Strada is a fantastic choice.

So well done her.

It's time to land yourself a good sale

THE new property market is set for a reversal of 2007 in the coming 12 months, according to experts at RPC Land and New Homes.

This year has seen new home prices continue to rise and the market remain buoyant throughout the summer, before experiencing a slowdown towards the end of the year.

With brownfield sites becoming few and far between, there has been continued fierce competition between developers over sites, which in turn means land prices have stayed strong.

Peter Randall, managing director of RPC Land and New Homes, said he expected a slightly different situation in 2008, adding: "This year the market has been quite tough for developers, but they are still hungry for land and desperate to purchase good sites and that will continue into 2008 and beyond."

"This year has seen the new homes market start well and then slow down."

"I expect that to change in 2008, with perhaps a slow start followed by an upturn later in the year."

"I believe next year we will see more housing associations involved with developments in Kent to meet affordable housing numbers and

I think eco-friendly developments will also become more common.

"There is also a growing trend in some parts of the county for planners to look for more family housing, reversing the trend over the past few years for higher density developments such as flats."

"I would expect developers to follow suit and look to provide more two, three and four-bedroom properties."

"With competition still strong over sites for development, land prices look set to be maintained."

Cash in

"This, coupled with the axing of tax exemptions on empty commercial premises, means 2008 could be a wise time to cash in on land for development."

"It is always best to talk to an expert to get the best design and mix of unit for a plot of land."

RPC has offices at Dartford, Chatham, Maidstone, Ashford, Tonbridge and Haywards Heath.

For more details visit www.rpcland.co.uk or for a confidential discussion telephone Mr Randall on 01732 363633 or e-mail p.randall@rpcland.co.uk.

REVIEW PROPERTY ■ RESIDENTIAL

Striking home could be yours

ATTRACTIVE views and a courtyard garden overlooking the English Channel come with this end of terrace cottage located within walking distance of both Sandgate and Seabrook.

The well-presented accommodation has been updated in recent years with the installation of a fitted kitchen and gas central heating.

The cottage is arranged over two floors with the kitchen/diner and living room on the ground floor and two bedrooms on the first. One bedroom has a lavatory and wash basin and the second bedroom has a bathroom en suite.

Outside, the courtyard is L-shaped and has an area leading to a pathway from Sandgate High Street, which has shared access with the neighbouring properties and leads to a private courtyard garden.

Situated on the western edge of Sandgate High Street, both Hythe and Folkestone are about two-and-a-half miles away.

This property is available with a price guide of £245,000.

For more information call CR Child & Partners on 01303 267421.

City cottage is a des res

LOCATED within 250 metres of Canterbury's famous city walls, this mid-terrace period cottage is within walking distance of the city centre.

Deceptively large, the accommodation includes three bedrooms and spacious open plan 'through' living/dining room with a large window, exposed beams, open fire with stone surround, built in storage and an open tread staircase leading to the first floor.

The ground floor also has access to the cellar and double doors that open onto the garden. A second door leads to the kitchen and from there is a door into the cloakroom, which in turn gives access to the garden.

Two bedrooms are found on the first floor, one of which has a dressing area with hand basin and wardrobe. The third bedroom is located on the second floor and has a sloping ceiling and beams to one wall.

Outside, there is an enclosed cottage style back garden with a patio and lawn – a real bonus with a property so close to the city centre, say estate agents.

Canterbury boasts two railway stations and is within easy reach of the A2/M2, which leads on to both the M20 and M25 and road networks across the South East.

The seaside towns of Herne Bay and Whitstable are a short distance away and the historic market town of Faversham is just 10 miles to the west.

This property is priced at £265,000 through Caxtons Residential Estate Agents, who can be contacted on 01227 788088.

Clinic helps to keep the peace

STUDENTS will have access to vital work experience when the UK's first university-based mediation clinic is opened in Kent.

Canterbury Christ Church University is launching the unique project in January and the services will be free for local residents.

Crime and policing studies students will be able to observe the negotiation and mediation process first hand.

They will offer support to the centre's staff who are trained and accredited mediators.

Employments issues, marriage breakdown, personal injury and clinical negligence will be among the issues the clinic will help people resolve.

Ben Waters, director of the mediation clinic and a lecturer in law at the university, said: "The university is conscious of the role it plays within the community and the mediation clinic will help develop its relationship with residents."

Course for the new breed of journalist

Top names in the media attend the launch of a new university degree

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

LEADING figures in the media industry have launched a new school for journalists at a Kent university.

The University of Kent officially unveiled its Journalism and the News Industry degree programme at the Medway Campus in Chatham Maritime.

Gavin Esler, a graduate of the university and one of BBC2 Newsnight's presenters, and Roger Alton, the former editor of The Observer, attended the event as members of an advisory panel for the new course.

Technology has changed the way people access news and the University of Kent's journalism degree aims to prepare reporters for an industry that is becoming increasingly multifaceted.

Professor of Journalism Tim Luckhurst, who is a former editor of the Scotsman, told how the students on the course would study newspaper, broadcast and online journalism.

He said: "I took a lot of persuading that journalists should do degrees, I've always assumed it was not necessary."

"But the world has changed – there is new technology offering an unprecedented amount of access to information."

"It is very demanding for journalists who

NEWSHOUNDS: Roger Alton, Tim Luckhurst and Gavin Esler at opening of journalism degree have to rise above the competition from blogging anarchy on the internet.

"However, the traditional values of journalism – acquiring information and presenting it to the public – are still important and cannot just be done by anyone."

He said learning multimedia skills as well as a good academic training in the history and role of journalism in a free society were vital for modern journalists.

At 44, Mr Luckhurst has worked in print, radio, television and online journalism.

"I'm one of the people who almost through serendipity managed to work in all [areas of journalism]."

"They are no longer optional – if newspapers did not need the complete package then they will now," he added.

Students will learn about all sides of journalism in a state-of-the-art campus newsroom, he said speaking ahead of the launch on Tuesday.

And the advisory panel would be on hand to provide expert help and direction for the budding young Andrew Marrs.

Phil Harding, a former editor of Radio Four's Today programme and one of the founders of Radio Five Live and the editorial director of the Kent Messenger Group, Simon Irwin, are also members of the panel.

The teaching team at the Centre for Journalism includes two other distinguished members – Ian Reeves, an award-winning former editor of journalists' trade title Press Gazette, and national newspaper columnist Sarah Lonsdale.

Students keep airline on flight path

STUDENTS at a Kent university are helping a charter airline solve a scheduling problem as part of their computer degree courses.

More than 100 second-year students from the University of Kent's Computing Laboratory are doing work experience with XL Airways.

The airline is based at Gatwick and has a complex timetable of flights to more than 50 destinations in Europe, the Middle East, Asia and North America from 11 airports across the UK.

Daniel Hiller, who is group IT business architect for the airline and a graduate of the university, came up with the idea for the project.

He said: "This is a really exciting opportunity for our industry to work with academia and the university's undergraduate population, which I see developing into a long-term partnership."

"By gaining an insight into XL's business we hope that students will gain an appreciation for the leisure industry that could develop into future employment opportunities. I hope in this way that we can both benefit from this innovative approach to problem solving."

The students have been helping the airline ensure it has enough pilots to meet its timetable.

They must take into account staff levels, employment law and flying regulations.

The students have been designing and developing software in order to help solve the specific problems of the airline's flight schedules.

Head of the university's computing laboratory Professor Simon Thompson added: "It is difficult for any university department to provide realistic problems for their students, as typical industrial problems are complicated and large scale."

"However, it is precisely this sort of problem that XL Airways has to solve, and we're extremely grateful to the company for passing this on to our students."

Become a vital part of our new operation

Section Manager - Workshop

£27,500 - £32,500 • 37.5 hours per week covering early, late and night shifts • Aylesford Distribution Centre

At Waitrose, we've recently opened a new Regional Distribution Centre in Aylesford. With the aim of ensuring our quality produce gets to the right place at the right time, the centre will eventually serve 50 branches in the south of England. We can only do this, of course, with a fleet of vehicles that's kept in full working order - and this is the key role you'll play in our operation.

You'll manage a team of technicians responsible for the MOT and service programmes of our fleet. It will be down to you to ensure that repairs are carried out cost-effectively without compromising quality. The role will involve liaising with other departments to schedule maintenance activity, working closely with our Workshop Manager to maintain accurate records and sourcing parts from suppliers.

An experienced mechanic with City and Guilds 1, 2, 3 Vehicle Technician or equivalent, CITB/City and Guilds Refrigeration/Gas Handling, IRTEC and LGV C+E driving licence, you'll be a proven team manager who can lead by example. A professional commercial vehicle engineering qualification (to MIRTE level) is also essential, as are good interpersonal and IT skills.

As a Partner in our business, you can look forward to an excellent profit sharing scheme, which this year was equivalent to nine weeks' pay. We also offer discounts in Waitrose and John Lewis stores, pension scheme, free life assurance, subsidised educational, leisure and sporting activities, subsidised meals and five weeks' holiday after three years' service.

To apply, please send your CV, quoting reference VMI, to Debbie Read, Assistant Personnel Manager Supply Chain, Waitrose Ltd, Southern Industrial Area, Bracknell, Berkshire RG12 8YA.
Closing date: 11th January 2008.

The Partnership is committed to providing equal opportunities for all regardless of differences such as gender, ethnic origin, disability, sexual orientation, age, social background, religion and belief.

TOYOTA is not saying so officially, but has responded to claims that its latest generation RAV4 may have been priced out of the junior 4x4 market that it actually created.

There are several tempting and more affordable alternatives already, such as the Nissan Qashqai – in 4x4 guise – Kia Sportage and Suzuki Grand Vitara, while Ford, Volvo and VW are all readying smart looking rivals.

However, what Toyota is saying officially is the new RAV4 XTR will become the most popular RAV derivative, offering an upgraded specification while costing less than the current XT4 version.

Toyota estimates the XTR's total added value at £1,565, including rear privacy glass, six-spoke alloys, chromed grille and front under-bumper protection plate. As on the powerful T180 flagship model, the rear-mounted spare has also been deleted and allows the tailgate to swing through the full 90 degrees for easier loading.

A tyre inflation/repair kit is supplied instead of the extra wheel, though no mention is made of the saving to Toyota on this.

Still, the XTR looks the part inside with standard goodies including hands-free phone operation, steering wheel-mounted controls and rear parking sensors – leather upholstery is available as an option.

It also comes with XT4's standard kit of dual-zone climate control, front fog lamps, heated retractable door mirrors, six-speaker/six-CD autochanger and sunroof.

Though XTR prices catch the eye with £19,995 for the two-litre petrol version, the key price is £21,425 for the highly desirable diesel – considerably less than the T180's £27,000 price tag. Acceleration is more modest than the T180's at 10.5 seconds for the 0-60mph sprint, but fuel consumption is better and should average around 42mpg.

• Toyota has also announced a value-for-money Yaris supermini model, the TR from £9,895 – saving £750 off its standard equivalent.

Specification includes 15-inch alloys, six-speaker sound system and steering wheel-mounted controls, air con and leather steering wheel and gear knob trim.

It is offered as a three- or five-door car with power options being a 1.3-litre VVT-i petrol or 1.4 D-4D 90 diesel engine – both are available with 'MultiMode' clutchless manual transmission.

Skodia Fabia gets sporty

SKODA has injected some image and extra value into the all-new Skoda Fabia supermini by unveiling a new Sport flagship trim.

Costing from £10,660, the Sport offers a more aggressive, purposeful look with its deeper front spoiler, 16-inch alloys, boot spoiler, chrome exhaust and rear diffuser.

Along with other extras, it brings £1,825 of goodies for a premium of just £940 over the existing Fabia 2. Deliveries start at the end of January 2008.

So, having been criticised for the car's unambitious design when launched in 2004, Britain's favourite car has had a major makeover using the 'kinetic' approach that inspired the Mondeo.

But Ford has also upgraded the interior and promises innovations such as double-clutch VW/Audi style auto transmission and an ultra-green 'ECONetic' version.

New Beemer to open niche

BMW thinks it has found a niche within a niche – albeit a pricey one – by creating the new BMW X6 'Sports Activity Coupé'.

Starting at nearly £42,000, the X6 is designed to offer the "safety and convenience of a command driving position with the on-road performance of a sports car, all wrapped in the svelte lines of a coupe".

It seems churlish to point out that this is effectively what Mazda is offering for around half the price with its CX-7 model.

But BMW is also making much of the fact that, for the first time in its history, the entire model range is turbocharged – there are four options topped by an all-new twin-turbocharged 4.4-litre V8 producing 408hp.

It makes the X6 xDrive50i the most powerful production X model BMW ever produced... and the car most likely to attract the attentions of the environmental lobby, even though the official 'average' fuel consumption is reckoned at 22.6mpg.

The BMW X6 launches in May, 2008

Audi crop top takes trad line

WHILE others see the folding hardtop as the way forward for convertibles, Audi is sticking with traditional fabric tops.

Its latest argument for status quo is the all-new Audi A3 Cabriolet – claimed to be the first ever premium compact class open-top car and due here next spring.

It joins the German upmarket brand's classic A4 Convertible and stunning TT Roadster.

Audi says the newcomer seats four and the rear seat backs can be folded for extra practicality.

Two petrol and two turbodiesel engines will be offered, ranging from 103bhp to 198bhp, and there is a standard suspension or optional sport setting.

The car is slightly shorter than the A3 Sportback.

Audi defends the decision to stay with a fabric roof by highlighting the "close fit, perfect tightness and the silhouette of a coupe" plus large heated rear screen.

Expect prices from at least £20,000.

Pivotal year in move to greener motoring

THIS year will pass into history as the one when global warming was accepted as fact and greener motoring became important to new car buyers.

Motor trade sources indicate that buyers' 'green-ness' is still affected more by a desire to save money – a cheaper vehicle excise duty banding means far more than the car's CO2 emissions.

Rising fuel costs have also undoubtedly made buyers shop around for cars that cover more miles to the increasingly expensive gallon – whether it be diesel or petrol.

Motor manufacturers will argue they haven't dragged their feet, but the fact remains it is far cheaper to carry on with products that simply adapt the tried and trusted internal combustion engine, rather than invest in expensive and untested technology.

Nevertheless, some names are doing a good job with the tools to hand: BMW's energy saving measures on the latest 1-Series and MINI show where the industry should be heading short term, while the VW group's small turbocharged and supercharged engines show you can have power when required without the overall fuel and emissions penalties.

I was also impressed by VW's efforts to create a greener all-round car with the miserly yet endearing VW Polo Bluemotion – even if the name tag is a bit confusing. Bluemotion Golf and Passat models are imminent.

However, it is a worry that some makers – notably Ford and Saab – see bio-fuels as the answer to keeping the internal combustion engine viable for now. Initial enthusiasm – and I include myself – has evaporated as onlookers realise the wider consequences of turning over vast areas of land to producing crops simply to keep people in gas guzzling vehicles.

It will place pressure on global food supplies, force and tempt emerging nations into further

GREEN: Honda's FCX Clarity, a new generation zero-emission, hydrogen-powered fuel cell vehicle, will be leased in southern California deforestation and simply postpone the issue of tackling over-use of the motor car.

As usual, it is the USA that worries me here; the most conspicuous energy waster of all seemed to be a biofuel sceptic, but warmed to the concept recently and has the arable land resources needed to make it work.

Could this change of heart have been influenced though by fears that oil supplies are dwindling faster than anyone realized, forcing the US Government to start 'ring-fencing' remaining reserves in order to ensure its armed forces do not run short?

Despite the gloom, one car maker is getting there with a viable alternative; Honda will soon start limited supplies of its FCX Clarity new generation zero-emission, hydrogen-powered fuel cell vehicle.

It will be leased to customers in southern California for around £290 a month – you can imagine the queue of Hollywood celebs building right now. Far from adding to that region's famous smog, it emits only water.

The problem remains of power generation needed to isolate hydrogen required to supply the force that ultimately runs the car's electric motor, but the pace of progress is encouraging.

Audi A3 Sportback

DOWNSIZING is happening, so how do you trade in the executive saloon and do your bit for the environment yet maintain status and cart the family about?

Well, I couldn't bring myself to buy the awkward looking BMW 1-Series and, for me, the Mercedes A-Class would represent too much change – more MPV than replacement for executive saloon or estate.

All of which brings me to Audi's rather handsome A3 executive hatchback and, in particular, the five-door Sportback model. Of course, it's not cheap; prices start at over 16 grand, which is pricey for what is essentially a Ford Focus class family hatchback, but not for a car that oozes class from its compact dimensions.

In pure styling terms, the three-door A3 probably beats its sister model by a nose, but the gain in versatility is well worth the £500 premium for the Sportback versions.

The boot is only slightly bigger than the three-door A3, but rear passengers will thank you for the extra convenience and accessibility – the travelling experience is as good for those in the back as in front.

Audi's Sportback makes

And while someone downsizing from an A4 saloon or its arch rival the BMW 3-Series might miss some boot space, they will like the impressive extra lugging capacity when one or both sides of the rear bench are folded down.

It almost goes without saying that the fit and finish of the interior is top notch; Audi is the brand that most 'real world' manufacturers now look to beat when finishing the inside of a car.

Everything is impeccably arranged with the key dials and gauges sitting – as they should – within the arc of the steering wheel. Everything you touch feels made to last and works logically and before you even fire up the engine you feel in harmony with the car.

On the road, this sensation is reinforced; the car is based on the excellent VW Golf chassis so the car errs on the side of firm, but delivers excellent handling manners with a flat cornering stance, good grip and sharp steering.

Ah, but hang on. If the Audi is based on a Golf, why don't I just save a stack of cash and go for a car that has a decent amount of cachet itself?

Fair point, but if you are a premium badge buyer or company car 'user chooser' the A3 allows you to stay in that status zone and, while it might cost more upfront, it will also be worth more when you hand over the keys.

The A3 is also a car that has the all-important feel good factor to go with its higher status and I confess to being seduced by the test car on this occasion, a near top-of-the-range Sportback 2.0TFSI Quattro S line.

Admittedly, it costs a hefty £25,000, but you get stacks of kit, the turbocharged 197bhp two-litre petrol unit from the Golf GTI and the legendary driver-flattering Quattro all-wheel drive system to help you put that power down.

Best of all, you get loads of grip without coping out and buying a 'sporting SUV', getting a premium badge hot hatchback instead that drives as well as it looks. If the price is a bit rich though, check out the 1.8 TFSI – it starts at £18,585 and you will be downsizing and still having some fun.

Pension rescue package is put right for workers

KENT members of pensions schemes with funding difficulties will be breathing a sigh of relief at the Governments recently announced Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS) rescue package.

The package is worth £2.9 billion and affects 140,000 workers who lost pension rights when their employer went bust, although only 3,500 have as yet started to receive payments.

The basic plan is to underwrite and pay 90 per cent of the value of their pensions.

That brings them in line with other workers covered by the Pension Protection Fund (PPF).

Tireless lobbying by workers, criticism from MPs and others eventual-

By Liz Rule
Pharon Independent
Financial Advisers Ltd
01227 787000

ly led to the U-turn and the package which many say Gordon Brown and others in the Treasury did not want to commit to.

Under the proposals, workers will now be entitled to 90 per cent of their expected pension and not the narrower 'core pension' protected under the original terms of the FAS.

Payments will be backdated to May 14, 2004, when the FAS was first announced.

In addition, workers will be able to draw a lump sum and those who are unable to work because of ill health will be able to apply for early retirement.

The change increases the pension payable to some members from paltry figures such as 10-12 per cent of their benefits to nearly a full pension.

Lead campaigner Peter Jackson, who lost his pension when the firm where he had worked for 41 years, ASW, went into receivership is said to be "delighted".

The financial services sector should be pleased as this may increase people's confidence in saving for retirement.

The Government is bringing in more radical changes to the pension system in 2012 and they had to get this right first.

Angels' trophy delight

FOOTBALL: Hamid Barr gave Tonbridge Angels one of the best results in their history as they knocked Oxford United out of the FA Trophy with a 1-0 win on Tuesday.

Three days after drawing 0-0 at Oxford's Kassam Stadium, Angels produced a brilliant display to overcome the non-league giants at the Longmead Stadium.

Angels boss Tommy Warrilow said: "I'm delighted with the result, the effort and the team performance. It will hopefully go down as one of the best days in the club's history."

The win put Angels into the last 32, where they will host AFC Wimbledon on January 12.

Mos aiming for top

ICE HOCKEY: Invicta Dynamics could go to the top of the ENIHL South B division with a win against Chelmsford today.

The Mos have a 100 per cent record in league games so far this season and sit two points behind league leaders Bracknell Hornets, who were beaten 4-2 at the Gillingham Ice Bowl last weekend.

A ninth consecutive league win coupled with a Hornets defeat in their match against Slough Hawks, would see Kevin Parrish's side top the division.

Even if results go against them this weekend, the Mos are well placed, with games in hand on their nearest rivals.

New drive for Conway

MOTORSPORT: Mike Conway has signed for Italian outfit Trident Racing to compete in next year's GP2 Championship.

The Sevenoaks racer finished 14th in his debut season, racing for Super Nova, following his British Formula 3 title win in 2006.

Trident Racing have been competing in the championship since last year and finished tenth in the team championship this season.

Conway said: "It's great to have tied up the deal before Christmas and to be joining Trident Racing. I believe we can be competing for podium finishes at every race weekend."

Conway, will join his new team for the first test of the New Year, which will feature the new-for-2008 GP2 car, on February 28 and 29.

Stones seal French deal

FOOTBALL: Maidstone United's dream of returning to the county town moved a step closer last week after the club received an offer from a French company to buy 25 per cent of the Ryman Premier League outfit.

Stones chairman Paul Bowden-Brown (pictured) has agreed in principle to the offer from the unnamed company, led by a British director.

It will boost United's plans to build a 3,000 capacity stadium at James Whatman Way, bringing the club home to the town for the first time in 20 years.

Bowden-Brown said: "We have been in discussions for over six months and when the offer was made it was an easy decision."

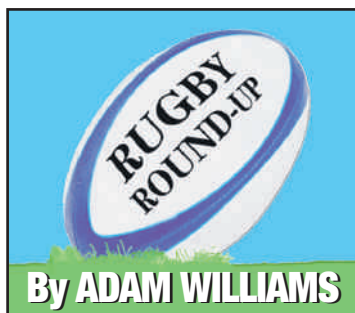

"For the first time, I met someone who thinks the same as I do and is prepared to become part of the club and work with us to bring the club home."

"To be fair, if we didn't get some investment soon, the club would not have been able to continue."

New Year, new league?

Teams' form puts them in prime place for promotion

KENT'S top rugby clubs have made a good start to the 2007-08 campaign and go into the Christmas break well set for a late surge for promotion.

Blackheath and Westcombe Park sit fourth and fifth in National League Two and in touching distance of the top three in the division.

League leaders Otley opened up a seven point gap after beating Blackheath 12-17 last weekend, but the Kent club will be happy with their position after a solid start to the season which could see them push for promotion.

Strong

Westcombe Park will be delighted with their performances in the division after being promoted from National League Three last season.

They have kept in touch with the top four in the division and will be looking for a strong second half of the campaign.

In National League Three South, Canterbury's indifferent form has seen their title challenge stutter, which made last weekend's 14-28 win at Barking all the more important.

It leaves the city club in fourth

GOOD START: Westcombe Park (stripes) have adapted well to life in National League Two after promotion last season behind Mounts Bay, Cinderford and London Scottish going into the break.

In London One, Thanet have found the going tough since winning their place in the league and they ended 2007 with another heavy defeat last week, going down 49-22 at Sutton & Epsom.

Wanderers will start 2008 bottom and with just a solitary win to show for their efforts.

Of Kent's six representatives in London Two South, only Beckenham – in fourth place with eight wins – look like realistic promotion contenders, although they are six points behind leaders Jersey and three points off a play-off place.

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells both started the season strongly, but have dropped off the pace in recent weeks and occupy fifth and sixth place respectively.

Old Colfeians narrowly missed out on the play-off place last season yet their early season form leaves them in the bottom half of the table going into 2008.

Sidcup, who were promoted after winning the London Three South East title last season, looked like strong candidates for the drop in the opening weeks of this campaign but have rallied in recent weeks and have climbed to eighth.

Sevenoaks have had a shocking end to 2007 and prop up the table with just one win to their name. The west Kent club have just 10 games left this season and will have to win at least half of them to avoid relegation.

The battle for promotion from London Three South East will be an all Kent affair with the top seven places occupied by the county's clubs.

Gravesend go into the New Year in pole position with a three point lead after amassing 21 points from their 12 games. Second-placed Dover have been the surprise package of the season following their promotion and go in to 2008 bursting with confidence.

Deal & Betteshanger, Lordswood, Aylesford Bulls, Old Dunstonians and Old Elthamians occupy places three to seven in the table and could all challenge for at least a play-off place if they can end the season strongly.

Tonbridge Juddian are the only Kent side that look like relegation candidates as their poor start to the season sees them just two points from the foot of the table. With just five points separating the bottom five, TJs will be quietly confident of staying up.

It has been a disappointing season for the Kent contingent in London Four South East and only Beccehamian, in fourth place, look capable of challenging for promotion.

Bognor are running away with the title, while Hove and Crowborough, in second and third, will fight it out with Beccehamian for the second promotion place.

Charlton Park, Folkestone and Bromley all went in to this season with promotion ambitions but all three have been inconsistent and, with just four wins apiece, are just four points ahead of newly promoted Whitstable, who prop up the table.

Barham in drive for Tour card

BENN Barham has his eyes on a first European Tour win in 2008 that will help propel him to the lucrative PGA Tour, writes Tom Howard.

Barham had his most successful year on the European Tour this year, finishing 89th on the order of merit. En route to his best finish in eight years, he secured a seventh place in Madrid and tied ninth in the BMW International Open, finishing just a shot behind 2002 Open winner Ernie Els.

Next year, the Chart Hills golfer hopes to secure his maiden win on the tour and finish in the top 60 so he can qualify for the prestigious end of season Volvo Masters, won by Justin Rose in November.

Barham, from Ashford, said: "To do that I will need to earn at least a half a million Euros in prize money. One of my biggest aims is to win a tournament this season. It would be lovely to win one, finishing in the top 10 is a good standard, but winning is what everyone wants to achieve."

Barham believes he still has what it takes to make a breakthrough on the American PGA Tour where the likes of golf superstars Tiger Woods and Vijay Singh ply their trade.

A hopeful Barham said: "Golfers do not

LOOKING FORWARD: Bann Barham hopes to secure his first tour victory in 2008, which could springboard him to the PGA Tour reach their peak until their mid-30s. I am 32 now and have not given up the ghost and I think my game is still progressing. I would love to get the chance to play at the highest level on the PGA Tour, but the European Tour is so strong there are a lot of good players and I believe it is not too far behind the PGA."

In the close season, Barham has been working on his fitness and he has recruited a new trainer in a bid to help his game and stamina on the long haul trips across the world.

The new season started in South Africa last week, but Barham was unable to carry his end of the season form and eclipse his 24th place in his previous South African Open. He missed the cut by four shots after two rounds affected by adverse wind conditions.

Barham said: "The first week in South Africa went well. In Cape Town the first day started great but the wind picked up in the afternoon and I struggled. It was tough conditions to play in and I ended the day nine over par."

"It affected everyone and the scores were very high. It is frustrating to miss by a few shots as you always count back in your mind to see where you could have picked up shots."

He hopes to get his season back on track when he returns to competition in the Abu Dhabi Championship on January 17.

Lawrenson takes a 'pop' at ref Bennett

PREMIERSHIP referee Steve Bennett has been at the centre of controversy this week following his decision to send off a Tottenham player in their Carling Cup quarter-final clash with Manchester City.

Bennett from Orpington, was criticised by a number of football pundits, including former Liverpool player Mark Lawrenson, for showing a red card to Spurs midfielder Didier Zokora.

Lawrenson, commenting on the game for BBC 5 Live, described Bennett a "toaster" for always popping his cards up during games.

Bennett, who officiated this year's FA Cup final at the new Wembley, sent off Zokora for a two-footed lunge on City's Elano, much to the dismay of Tottenham manager Juande Ramos.

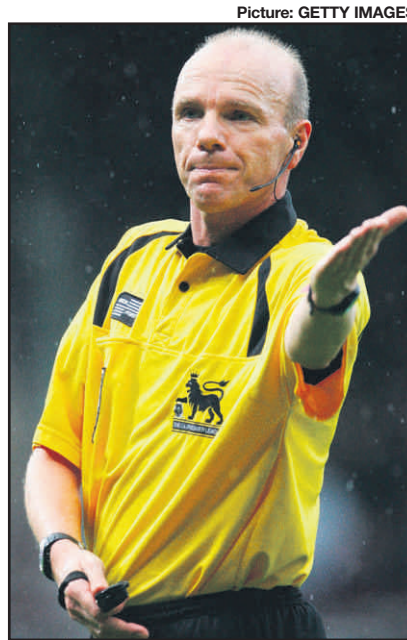

Despite criticism from all quarters, Bennett is unable to explain or defend his actions because the Premier League prefer for their referees to remain silent.

When contacted by Kent on Sunday, Bennett said he was not allowed to explain his decision to the media and the public because of FA Premier League guidelines.

A spokesman for the FA Premier League said: "Referees are not allowed to comment on individual decisions after games and we do not have any PR's allocated to them. We do not want referees becoming their own personalities."

Since the decision, the FA have rejected an appeal from Tottenham to rescind the red card.

Revealed: Fleet's plans for stadium

Club outlines future ambitions for Football League

By TOM HOWARD

EBBSFLEET United could be moving from their Stonebridge Road home in the next three years.

The club have ambitious plans of competing in the Football League and that would mean moving to a new ground – away from a stadium that has been their home for more than 60 years.

Chairman Jason Botley and director Brian Kilcullen this week outlined their hopes for the move from Stonebridge Road to a new 5,000-capacity stadium in the Gravesend area.

Last season, the club's ground was given the green light to host Football League matches if the club were to be promoted.

However, Kent on Sunday has learned the Football League told the club they would have to improve the ground by fitting more turnstiles and CCTV and employ more security staff within three years.

After the high profile takeover by website MyFootballClub, Ebbsfleet now have eyes on league football and they hope to achieve this with a new stadium.

Project

Kilcullen said: "We have seen a site we like and hope we can build the new ground there. We have now got a development partner to support the project and support from the Gravesham council and South East England Development Agency.

"It will be minimum league criteria, so if we do progress into the Football League we can grow as a club. If we are very lucky we could be moving there within three years."

He would not reveal the location of the new site.

Also at the meeting, Botley rubbished rumours that manager Liam Daish is to take the vacant manager's role at League Two side Brentford.

Daish has been in charge at Stonebridge Road since 2005 and almost guided them to the play-offs last season but missed out by just four points.

Botley said: "I am sure he has been linked to the job and he will be wanted by other clubs. We have heard nothing from Liam saying he wants to move. He is committed to this club and is fully behind the MyFootballClub takeover."

HOME: Stonebridge Road has been Ebbsfleet United's ground for more than 60 years

Many of the questions fired at the board were regarding the imminent takeover by the website group.

Botley assured worried fans the club was not in serious debt and had not been forced to accept the £700,000 offered by the website.

Botley said: "It is an exciting time for Ebbsfleet and at the forefront of this is the much-needed investment in the club. We have been looking for investment for a number of months now to sustain the club's future as a professional outfit."

The deal was due to be completed before Christmas, but Kilcullen admitted it has taken longer than anticipated, although the due diligence period is expected to be finalised in January.

Kilcullen said: "We hope it will be concluded with the view in mind that Liam, who has been looking at players, will have the opportunity to bring in new faces in the transfer window."

High on the list of worries for Fleet fans was the result of the name change, which happened in the summer and the team selection by more than 20,000 football fans who have signed up to the website.

However, many of the fans are thought to have come to terms with this innovation.

Jessica McQueen of supporters' club, Fleet Trust, said: "I think the whole decision-making process by the MyFootballClub members is a red herring. I do not think it is going to be as big a problem as we all feared."

The change of name from Gravesend & Northfleet to Ebbsfleet was much maligned by the club's fans, but Botley believes it has had a positive effect on the club.

He said: "The name change to Ebbsfleet United was about realising the opportunity of moving this club forward. It was not because of the deal with Eurostar, but I believe it has had a positive impact. We thought it would be good to try to fit into the regeneration of the Ebbsfleet area."

The club are concerned about the drop in attendances at Stonebridge Road as they used to attract crowds of 1,500 a few seasons ago, but that has since dropped down to an average of 987 this season.

Tony Giles, a Fleet fan for 30 years, said: "This is the first opportunity to quiz the directors and I feel a little more comfortable with the takeover. I am still a bit sceptical about the name change."

"I know there are people out there who have been supporters for a long time who won't come because of it. Football is an emotional subject but people have got to get that out of their heads."

Key ready to pad up

CRICKET: Kent captain Robert Key will be hoping for a call up to England's Test side for the trip to New Zealand after their poor performance in Sri Lanka.

Key, who topped Kent's batting averages last season, has been in Sri Lanka commenting on the Test series. He is on standby and will fancy his chances of a place for the New Zealand series in February – especially after England's capitulation in Galle, where they were bowled out for just 81.

Two Kent cricket supporters will be celebrating this Christmas after winning a copy of Cricket Year 2007. KoS and A&C Black teamed up to offer readers a copy.

The winners were Margaret Read from Folkestone and Gary Pearson from Canterbury.

Shepherd's big scalp

DARTS: Kent darts star Kirk Shepherd caused a major shock at the PDC World Championships, beating fourth seed Terry Jenkins.

The 21-year-old won the first round clash 3-2 after coming back from 2-1 behind at Alexandra Palace.

The 21-year-old from Ramsgate, started the match well, taking the opening two legs before Jenkins hit back.

Jenkins then won the next eight of the nine legs to go within a leg from winning the contest.

However, Shepherd fought back to claim a famous victory and book his place in the next round on Wednesday, against Mick McGowan.

Injury rules Reid out

FOOTBALL: On the eve of the busy festive period, Charlton Athletic were rocked by the news that skipper Andy Reid has been ruled out of action, probably until February.

The Irish playmaker limped out of last weekend's 4-2 defeat to promotion rivals West Bromwich Albion, and faces between six and eight weeks on the sidelines due to a knee injury.

Reid took his place in a busy treatment room in the build-up to yesterday's home match against Hull City, being joined by top scorer Chris Iwelumo and midfielders Darren Ambrose (pictured) and Zheng Zhi.

And while Iwelumo was expected to shake off an ankle injury to play some part against the Tigers, Ambrose and Zheng were rated major doubts for the closing Valley clash of 2007.

Hit by suspensions ahead of the game against the Baggies, manager Alan Pardew must now do without the inspirational Reid for a critical period of the season.

Striker thanks spell with Gills for putting him in picture for African Cup of Nations call-up

By DAVID PRITCHARD

CHRIS Dickson could feature on the world stage next month after he was included in Ghana's preliminary squad for the African Cup of Nations – a call-up he puts down to his loan spell at Gillingham.

The 23-year-old finished a three-month loan spell with the club on Friday after being recalled by Charlton boss Alan Pardew. His stay at Priestfield featured a scoring run of 11 goals in 12 games, which attracted the attention of the Ghanaian national scouts.

Qualifying for Ghana through his father, Dickson will join up with a 40-man preliminary squad at a training camp in the United Arab Emirates early next month.

If he makes it into Claude Le Roy's final 23-man squad, the youngster will have the chance to make an impact for the hosts and tournament favourites in matches screened all over the globe.

The striker, who is contracted to Charlton Athletic, puts the call-up down to his displays for the Gills.

He told Kent on Sunday: "If I was at Charlton I would have probably been in the reserves but it's not as much of a spotlight as playing in League One. Gillingham have definitely contributed to where I am now."

"Many thanks to them because they have obviously helped me to progress. I have done so much work with the club to get me where I am now."

Shock

The call-up completes a remarkable nine months for Dickson, who was playing for Dulwich Hamlet in Ryman Division One South until he got a dream move to Charlton Athletic in March.

He said: "This year is going from one thing to another. This time last year I was playing non-league football. [Gills' former first-team coach] Iffy Onoura mentioned to me before he left that I had been looked at by Ghana scouts, so I knew there was a chance, but I hadn't heard anything for ages so I thought it would come to nothing."

"It was a bit of a shock to the system. I think every young boy wants to play at the highest level."

The rise from Kent non-league football to international honours is not completely unheard of, with John Keister appearing for Sierra Leone while playing for Margate. But as Keith Masters, chief executive of the Kent County FA, points out, while Sierra Leone are one of world football's minnows, Ghana are a different proposition.

He said: "It does happen but Ghana are one of the most prominent nations in Africa. It is great news, I am delighted for him and we wish him all the best. The standard of non-league football now is of a much greater standard and this shows it."

CALL-UP: Gills striker Chris Dickson has been named in the Ghana squad for the African Cup of Nations Picture: KEITH SLATER

Dickson initially joined Gills on a four-week deal but his displays have seen the deal renewed twice. League rules prevent another extension, so a new agreement would have to be struck in January if the striker was to return to Priestfield.

Gills boss Mark Stimson has repeatedly stated he would like to bring Dickson back in the New Year, but the player thinks it is unlikely. While the striker does not rule out a return, he plans to make his mark at the club which plucked him from non-league obscurity earlier this year.

He said: "I could never say never. If there was an opportunity of coming back to Gillingham I'm not going to say no, but come January I want to be pushing for the Charlton first team."

Although he may never appear in a Gills shirt again, the club's supporters have made an impact on him.

He said: "The fans have been amazing, sometimes I feel like I am leaving home when I leave Gillingham. The supporters have been really close to me, I have had

DECEMBER 8 – Scores his 11th goal in as many games in the home defeat to Port Vale

TUESDAY – Included in Ghana squad

FRIDAY – Recalled to Charlton and goes straight into squad for game against Hull City lots of Christmas cards coming through."

Since scoring a hat-trick against Luton Town on his first start in October, he has scored half Gillingham's goals. Fans may fear a downturn in results after his departure, but Dickson believes the squad are good enough and in Stimson they have a boss capable of turning it round.

He said: "They are more of a unit now. Everything seems more solid. He has his own ideas and everything is fresh. He brought in non-league players which everyone was talking about, but they've shown they have talent."

"I know from January the manager probably has ideas to bring in more for the second half of the season but there is definitely enough talent here to get the team up the table. A play-off place is realistic."
